Atlanta P. O. Receipts Make Big Increase

Postal receipts, an acknowledged barometer of business, showed an increase of approximately 17 per cent in Atlanta during the month just ended, as compared with May of last year, according to Postmaster E. K. Large.

The receipts for May, 1932, were $256,363.90 and the receipts for the May just ended were $299,759.12. This is an increase of $43,395.22. Mr. Large declared that this increase is gratifying and can be taken as an indication of returning business life and an increase in buying.

BIBLE SCHOOL HERE WILL OPEN JUNE 12

Atlanta's first city-wide interdenominational daily vacation Bible school will open June 12 and close June 23 at the Peachtree Christian church, 200 Peachtree street, N. E. The school will be open from 9 a. m. to 12 m. and will be open to all children from kindergarten age to the first year in high school. The school will include religious education, music, temperance and other allied subjects. No tuition or enrollment fees will be charged and children in the intermediate department will receive a daily half-hour instruction in health under the direction of Mrs. Ralf J. Brown. A pageant entitled

350-PAGE HISTORY OF BARTOW COUNTY READY FOR READERS

A voluminous history of nearly 350 pages of stirring events in Bartow county has been published and is ready for historical circulation by the historical committee of the county and represents months of painstaking research, according to the publishers. Edited by Lucy J. Cunyus and printed in the office of the Carverville Tribune-News, the book was attractively bound by the J. M. Marbut Company, of Atlanta.

A feature of the volume is a reproduction of an oil painting of Governor Francis S. Bartow, for whom the county was named, and of members of the historical committee who made the book possible. They are George H. Aubrey, Arthur V. Neal, Claude C. Pittman and Miss Cunyus. Opening with a foreword which expressed appreciation for the efforts of several Georgians who aided in compiling information for the volume, the book begins with the Indian occupation of the section. First the county was named Cass and later changed to Bartow. Throughout the book are names of famous sons and daughters of one of Georgia's most fertile sections in business, progress and letters.

"The Gospel in Georgia," which will form a part of the Georgia bicentennial celebration, will feature the closing day of the school.

Last August at The Constitution's annual summer school of cookery, Kate Stafford, shown above, made so many friends, and won such applause that The Constitution promised to bring her here again. True to promise, Mrs. Stafford will be on hand to conduct The Constitution-Volunteer Food Stores Cooking School and Food Show at the Georgia theater on June 13, 14, 15 and 16.

The Constitution and Volunteer Food Stores Cooking School and Food Show! This exclamation will be repeated by many happy housewives during the course of the next few days.

Once more The Georgia theater will be crowded with eager, happy housewives. For four mornings on June 13, 14, 15 and 16 the Georgia theater will be the experimental kitchen of Atlanta women while they listen to Miss Kate Stafford. Watch quick and dexterous preparations and ask questions about any household problem that the past year has brought forth.

Under skilled instruction, the audience will discover that cooking is fun and not drudgery. The right equipment, scientific methods, a bit of old-fashioned common sense and a real zest for your job are the things which make for successful as well as happy housekeeping.

"Success in Cooking" adds this able instructor, "is within reach of all. Recipes need not be complicated, in fact, the simplest foods are often the most favored. Neither is it necessary to devote long and laborious hours to a meal preparation." Her recipes will bear this out, and will show many a grateful housewife how to plan meals that will save time and effort, as well as money, and yet give sufficient variety to satisfy the

FLORIDA SOLONS END LONG SESSION

Governor Says Major Portion of Program Enacted Into Law.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., June 3.—(AP)—After stopping the clock for 26 hours in order to clear a last-minute legislative jam, the Florida legislature ended a 60 days biennial session today in which Governor Dave Sholtz said "by far the major portion of the program has been put over for the people."

The dying hours of the session were marked by a one-vote defeat of the administration's debt funding measure by which the governor sought to have fiscal affairs of governmental units in bond default brought under control of himself and cabinet.

With the exception of a tax on beer and wines, legalized after 21 days of struggle between house and senate, no new sources of revenue were tapped. The beer and wine money will go to the public schools.

Florida's expression on repeal of the eighteenth amendment was assured with passage of a measure authorizing the governor to call a special election when 67 delegates from the state at large will be selected to form a state convention for the purpose.

New Tax Rate. The automobilist found relief in an act that fixes the rates of license tags on a flat scale of $5, $10, $15, $20, according to weight, instead of the present rates of 60 and 75 cents per hundred.

While the clocks were stopped, the legislature also hastened to pass a measure to submit to the people in November, 1934, a proposed constitutional amendment to reduce the number of judicial circuits from 28 to 15. Such legislation failed in several past sessions.

Another proposed constitutional amendment to be submitted to the electorate in 1934 would exempt from taxation homesteads of value not exceeding $5,000, freeing thousands of owners of small homes from state property burdens.

Economies were effected when the legislature passed an appropriations bill calling for expenditures of approximately $6,600,000 annually for general state expenses, compared with the appropriation of $8,049,515 annually by the 1931 session.

Salaries of state officials were cut an average of about 20 per cent. A bill was passed cutting fees allowed to be collected by county officers. In some instances the fees were cut 60 per cent.

New Debt Measure. To relieve further the bond debt situation—administration leaders estimated that about $800,000,000 in bonds is outstanding in Florida—a law was created allowing the state board of institutions, at the request of county commissioners, to issue gasoline tax money to purchase bonds at market prices instead of retiring the issues at par.

Attempts to obtain passage of sales taxes were killed in both houses. The gasoline tax, however, remains at 7 cents a gallon and the distribution of the funds, three cents to the highway department, three cents to counties to retire bonds and one cent to the state general fund, stands.

The only major consolidation was that which merged the state geological survey department, the game and fish department, and the shell fish department into a conservation commission.

A bill placing control of the state's high schools in the hands of the state board of public instruction and giving the board broad powers to deal with school financing was passed. It was described by the governor as giving "great impetus forward in sensible business operations."

A measure, drawn by request of the governor, to give him "extraordinary" and virtual dictatorial powers to reorganize the state government died on the calendar.

Nearly 2,600 bills were introduced during the session.

ELKS GOOD-WILL FLEET DUE TODAY

Two of the six cars of the Elks-Studebaker good-will fleet, whose arrival at Milwaukee will signal the opening of the Elks annual grand lodge convention, are scheduled to arrive in Atlanta on Friday. A comprehensive plan of reception for them has been drafted by the following committee of the local Elks lodge: Forest Fowler, chairman; Howard Saunders, John McClelland, A. M. Carlsen, Gordon Hardy, U. A. Morton, Jason Tugule, A. B. Madison and Frank Robinson.

The cars, painted with the official purple and white of the Elks, are owned by C. E. T. Shoufeld and George A. Wightman, members of this order who are carrying a message of good will from the National Order of Elks to the subordinate lodges scheduled to be visited on their journey "cross country."

The Atlanta delegation will meet the fleet at Hapeville, where Mayor Arnold will greet and address them. Escorted by motorcycle officers and accompanied by the uniformed organizations of the lodge, the delegation and their visitors will then motor to the city hall in Atlanta, where they will be welcomed in an address by Mayor Key. From the city hall they will go to the Elks home on Peachtree street, where the visitors will be officially welcomed by Past Exalted Ruler L. J. Bailey and entertained by the officers and members of the lodge.

SCHOOL AGE CENSUS REVEALS GAIN HERE

The school census of children between the ages of 6 and 18 years, outside of the city limits, has been completed, according to Jere A. Wells, superintendent of county schools, and the number shows a substantial increase over the figures compiled by enumerators in 1928, when the last census was taken.

The census is taken every five years and the present report shows 25,377 children of school age in the county, as compared with 21,083 in 1928. Mr. Wells pointed out that these figures include the census of old Campbell and Milton counties, which were not a part of this county in 1928.

As a result of the enumeration, the legislative appropriations for schools, based on the number of children of school age, will run for Fulton county approximately $15,000 in 1934 over the appropriation from the state in 1928, said Mr. Wells.

SPECIAL ADDED PRIZES—Two Free Trips to World's Fair to the person entering the most Jinkys during the contest.

TWELVE QUALIFIED IN CONGRESS RACE IN TENTH DISTRICT

J. M. Pitner, Miles Collier and Hoke O'Kelley Formally Enter Contest on Closing Day.

Hoke O'Kelley, of Loganville, candidate for the gubernatorial nomination last fall, today qualified as a candidate to succeed the late Congressman Charles H. Brand in the tenth congressional district.

His name brought to 12 the number qualified.

Two other new entries today are J. M. Pitner, of Washington, Ga., and Miles Collier, representative of Madison county. Entries closed at 4 p. m. today, and the election will be held July 5.

Other entries are:

Roy V. Harris, representative of Richmond county; Pat Kennedy, of Augusta; Mrs. A. R. Shivers, of Norwood; Emerson George, of Madison; James Cartledge, representative of Richmond county; D. T. Bowers, of Canon; A. D. Dens, of Augusta; W. P. Congdon, of Augusta, and Paul Brown, of Elberton.

SISK GIVES HIS SUPPORT TO BROWN FOR CONGRESS

ELBERTON, Ga., June 3.—(AP)—J. T. Sisk, who has been mentioned as a probable candidate for congress to fill the unexpired term of the late Congressman Charles H. Brand, has announced he would give his unqualified support to Paul Brown, one of the most prominent members of the state bar. Mr. Sisk was an outstanding member of the last state senate.

Friends of Mr. Brown have organized a Paul Brown-for-Congress Club, and are waging an active campaign. They report that Mr. Brown is receiving offers of strong support throughout the district, and is regarded by many as the leading candidate. On account of the short time the club does not anticipate much speaking during the campaign.

HOKE O'KELLEY GIVES STATE OF PLATFORM

LOGANVILLE, Ga., June 3.—Hoke O'Kelley, of Loganville, candidate for governor last summer, has entered the race for congress from the tenth Georgia district. He is now practicing law and is a member of the Georgia Bar Association. During the World War he was in the field artillery and the air service and is now a member of the American Legion. In 1928 and 1930 he was mayor of Loganville and chairman of the board of education, and has served three years as superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school here.

In the governor's race last summer he championed the cause of prohibition. He still favors the prohibition laws, their retention and enforcement. He stated today that if elected he will advocate recognition of the present Russian government by the United States and a complete reorganization of the federal government. He favors a reduction of postage to two cents and a removal of the tax on bank checks. He is opposed to any further reduction in the size of our army and is a member of the United States army air reserves.

ROY HARRIS SPEAKS AT CRAWFORDVILLE

CRAWFORDVILLE, Ga., June 3.—Roy V. Harris, candidate for congress from the tenth district, to fill the unexpired term of the late Charles H. Brand, spoke at Crawfordville here this afternoon. In part he said: "The republican party was in power for 12 years. During the past four years the republican president and the leaders of industry and commerce in America have been issuing periodical statements declaring that prosperity was immediately around the corner and during the entire time the American people were unable to navigate the corner.

"For the first time in four years there has appeared on the horizon a real hope. The president's plan for the inflation of the currency has brought 10-cent cotton and hopes for a better price. The president's plans have already brought higher wages and hope for more employment.

"The democratic administration is exposing the whole financial structure of the nation whereby monopolies and trusts have thrived at the expense of the people with the attendant result that 50 per cent of the wealth of the nation has accumulated in the hands of less than 5 per cent of the people.

"This is no time for the tenth district to be represented in congress by a man whose loyalty to the democratic cause has ever been questioned or there is a possibility of it being questioned in the future.

"There are candidates in this race who have supported every ticket from the socialist up and down, have campaigned for Herbert Hoover and Calvin Coolidge and opposed every principle now advocated by the great democratic leader, and there is a candidate in this race whose campaign was launched by a director of the Georgia Power Company.

"When congress meets again in December the democratic party will face the greatest crisis of its history. During the adjournment of congress in June and its meeting in December

That Three Can Live Just as Cheaply as One Proved by Sister Trio at Georgia University

By putting to practice what they learned about home economics, three sisters have spent only $3,000 to complete a four-year course at the Georgia State College of Agriculture. Usually it costs one girl that much. Here are the money-savers in their kitchen—left to right, Ruby, Eddie May and Pauline Burson.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 3.—(AP)—Three have lived as cheaply as one during the past four years and acquired a college education too. The Burson girls—Ruby, Eddie May and Pauline—farmer's daughters, put their home economics studies to a practical purpose and this year are completing four years of higher learning at a total cost of $3,000. That's the usual amount required to give only one girl a college education at the Georgia State College of Agriculture, which the Burson girls have attended.

Ruby, the eldest, was teaching before the other girls finished high school. She didn't want to go to college without her sisters, so she waited until they were ready.

Entered Together. Eddie May, a couple of grades ahead of Pauline, had to stay out of school for a while. Pauline caught up, and the girls' father, R. P. Burson, well-to-do Georgia farmer, left it up to them to select their school. They chose the college of agriculture so they might study home economics. They found an apartment and set up housekeeping with the chores equally divided. It was a bit hard on the pocketbook the first year because freshmen don't know so much about managing. The cost ran up to about $800.

Cheaper Each Year. The second year they cut this to $750, the third year it was something less, and this year they have managed to hold it to $700.

Included in these amounts are the tuition costs, which totaled $1,080—

$300 a year for each girl. Social and athletic obligations had to be met too.

The girls bought their own clothes, but their father gave them a lift on the food problem by coming up with eggs, butter, meat and vegetables from the farm.

Housekeeping didn't detract from participating in school life—they won honors in athletic events and made good scholastic records.

Honors for Father. Papa Burson is distinguished too. Because of his success as a farmer Governor Eugene Talmadge named him a member of the board of regents, controlling all state institutions of higher learning.

Since the Burson girls are members of the home economics college, and he's the only dirt farmer on the board, his girls all want to teach.

H. F. LAWSON HEADS BAR ASSOCIATION

Lawyers Reject Resolution on Salaries of Superior Court Judges.

By CECIL M. JONES, Associated Press Staff Writer.

SEA ISLAND BEACH, Ga., June 3.—H. F. Lawson, of Hawkinsville, was elected president of the Georgia Bar Association here today at the closing session in which the association declined to go on record opposing fixing salaries of superior court judges by "local political bodies."

The resolution was offered by P. C. McDuffie, of Atlanta, who sought to argue it on the floor but he was ruled out of order. The resolution said salaries of some superior court judges exceeded those of justices of the supreme court and proposed a constitutional amendment fixing superior court salaries and taking away any power of local political bodies to change them. It also condemned the alleged practice of superior court judges appointing those who control their salaries to positions "carrying large fees." The resolution was referred to the incoming resolutions committee for action.

A. C. Wheeler, of Gainesville, was elected a member of the executive committee; John B. Harris, of Macon, was re-elected secretary, and Logan Blackley was re-elected treasurer. Mr. Blackley is superior court clerk of the court of appeals.

W. G. Love, of Columbus, was elected first vice president.

The vice presidents by districts are as follows: Edward A. Dutton, Savannah; S. F. Mitchell, Tifton; W. G. Love, Columbus; Claude Christopher, Barnesville; Robert P. Tuttle, Atlanta; C. C. Crockett, Dublin; J. M. Blair, Marietta; Frank Scarlett, Brunswick; T. H. Crawford, Blue Ridge; Henry G. Howard, Augusta.

Next year's convention city is to be selected by the executive committee.

The convention appropriated $250 to the patrons' committee of the Georgia bicentennial as a memorial to the late Chief Justice Logan E. Blackley, whose name will be inscribed on the tablet in the capitol.

Henry A. Shinn, professor of law at Mercer University, in an address before the association, said the time had arrived for the legal profession to "take the lead and not be driven."

"The legal profession has come to realize more than ever before that it owes a duty to the public which is not discharged by merely defending or prosecuting the rights of clients," he said.

A change in the present corporate system is needed, he declared, "and that change will come through legislation or through an economic civil war and such a war is not a mere bogey upon the staid and sturdy farmer, the backbone of law and order, manhandling the judges of our courts in an effort to quash foreclosure proceedings."

Does Atlanta Want Georgia Milk?

PETITION

To the
HON. G. C. ADAMS, Commissioner of Agriculture, State Capitol, and
DR. J. P. KENNEDY, City Health Officer, City Hall, Atlanta, Ga.

The undersigned, who are owners or operators of Georgia farms, dairies, and herds, providing 11,000 gallons of milk daily, engaged in supplying milk to Atlanta, Ga., earnestly request and petition you to investigate the charges that milk is being shipped to Atlanta from without the state to certain Atlanta distributors, who are daily being offered milk produced by us, refusing it and taking milk reputed to be shipped to Atlanta from other states.

We are calling this matter to your attention and respectfully inquire of you: Are the health laws of the city of Atlanta and state of Georgia being violated in milk shipments from out of the state?

We are striving for the upbuilding of the dairy industry, and thereby Georgia and Atlanta, but more important, we are endeavoring to furnish Atlanta consumers daily fresh, pure, healthful milk.

Our milk is being offered every morning to the distributors of Atlanta at a price which is fair and reasonable, which is 16c per gallon.

We have not been notified of any complaint as to the healthfulness or quality of milk produced by us from dairies inspected by representatives of the city of Atlanta or the state of Georgia.

We, the following Georgia Milk Producers, respectfully present the petition herewith:

To Members of the Georgia Milk Producers' Confederation and to Whom It May Concern:

An advertisement has appeared in the Atlanta newspapers signed by "ATLANTA MILK DEALERS' ASSOCIATION" in which it is stated that representatives of the Georgia Milk Producers' Confederation "have rushed in, seeking to get an unfair advantage over other producers by demanding that the Atlanta Milk Dealers buy their milk only from producers who are members of the Confederation." The facts are that the Georgia Milk Producers' Association has offered its milk since June 1st and is still offering milk from the same producers to the same distributors, each morning at a price of $1.85 per hundred weight of 4% butterfat with no requirement that the distributors buy "milk only from producers who are members of the Confederation." The offer is in writing and is the only offer made by this association to the Atlanta Milk Dealers.

Why is it that the above proposal, which is the only one made, "Would literally wreck many milk producers by destroying the market of those who have not seen fit to join that organization?" Is it because the price is too high? The Atlanta Milk Dealers, by their representatives, entered into a proposal on May 22nd, 1933, as follows: "We believe that a minimum price for Grade A fluid milk containing 4 per cent butterfat should be fixed at One Dollar and Ninety Cents ($1.90) per hundred pounds." We have not heard of their paying it, but surely they do not object to a higher price than $1.50 to $1.57 per hundred, which they have been paying, because of the interest in seeing that the members of the Confederation do not take "unfair advantage over other producers."

The proposal which the representatives of the Atlanta Milk Dealers made on May 22 last was made in the office of the Georgia Commissioner of Agriculture in the presence of Commissioner Adams, at a conference presided over by the Assistant Commissioner.

We wonder how the Atlanta Milk Dealers' Association knows that the "Georgia State Department of Agriculture recognizes the unfairness of the Confederation's demands?" Granting the State Department of Agriculture has the authority to decide the merits of the supposed case, it surely would not do so without knowing the facts. Usually the right of a farmer to offer for sale his farm crops is not subject to the direction of the Commissioner of Agriculture. In this particular instance the farmers of the Confederation are organized under the co-operative marketing laws of the state and have a state charter, which gives them the right and power "to promote, foster and encourage the business of marketing dairy products or commodities co-operatively, to minimize speculation and waste in the production and marketing of dairy products or commodities, to handle co-operatively and collectively the problems of milk producers."

The new Farm Relief Act was enacted to relieve the farmer of the burden of supporting an undue amount of selling cost being added to the merchandising or handling of his products. So it would hardly seem that the co-operative farmer-dairyman is in jeopardy.

The members of the Georgia Milk Producers' Confederation, according to written statements recently made by them, are producing 10,339 gallons of milk daily. They are among the leading citizens of the state and especially of 22 counties near Atlanta. The aggregate value of their herds, farms and other property is very great. It would be a great loss to the state and the city of Atlanta should they be compelled to go out of the dairy business because of the very low price paid to them for their products.

We do not believe the shipment of milk from without the state for the consumers of Atlanta (if such shipments are being made) is the way the Atlanta Milk Dealers' Association can best demonstrate its interest in the success of the dairymen of the state of Georgia.

"The Atlanta Milk Dealers' Association welcomes a public airing," according to their own advertisement. This page contains facts about the Georgia Milk Producers' Confederation, the names of the officers and directors of the Association. Possibly the Atlanta Milk Dealers' Association will explain the purpose of that organization and give the names of its officers and members.

The people of the United States, accustomed by now to the breath-taking speed of the administration in dealing with domestic problems, soon will have an opportunity to see how foreign statesmen act when they are dug by the Roosevelt rowel.

The American delegation en route to the London economic conference, which opens June 12, is talking about such modern Washington things as day and night sessions and a minimum of oratory.

There are high American hopes that this great meeting of the nations, unprecedented because it will be the first time representatives of all the world have joined to create jobs for workers and profits for owners, will be over in six to eight weeks, with its task accomplished.

Dispatches from Europe indicate the Europeans are not entirely that optimistic. Some of them tend to the belief that the conference will adjourn within two months, resorting to the customary business of turning its incomplete work over to the committees.

Wearied skepticism is, of course, easy enough to apply in advance, and the professionally wearied commentators already are doing it, but this is unmitigated. Never before has an international conference of importance been preceded by so many solemn declarations of determination to get somewhere past the stage of hifalutin' orations.

President Roosevelt has contributed his bit toward the attaining of speed and success by his preliminary discussions with representative nations in Washington. Each of the Washington talks was followed by an official statement indicating that everything was harmonious. The idea was to get as much as possible cleared away in advance.

How has that plan worked? A surface indication is that when the president gave his last instructions to his delegation he outlined four major objectives—to revive trade by cutting tariffs and keeping currencies from bobbing up and down; to raise the commodity price level; to create jobs by simultaneous government works construction; and to revive business and boost prices by credit expansion through central banks. In the house of commerce, Friday Chamberlain set forth the exact program.

To be sure, there is considerable difference between agreement on principles and agreement on concrete measures which will entail sacrifice on the part of the nations. But where there has been some talk of give-and-take there must be some disposition to turn it into action.

One interesting phase of the period of preparation for the conference is the flood of rumors in world capitals which have provided perfect examples of wish playing the sire thought.

For instance, the other day the French considered it of sufficient importance to deny a report that they would make a dramatic gesture of good-will by suddenly paying the $10,000,000 war interest they refused to pay the United States last December.

There have been numerous reports, especially in Europe, that Mr. Roosevelt would take ship and hasten to the conference, carrying with him a large dose of magic with which to slay the devils of the depression.

At this writing there is no indication promising any such dramatic touch as that. But nothing of the sort is needed to make of the world monetary and economic conference an event worth keeping an eye on. Aside from its promise in the field of actual accomplishment, there will be that test of the Roosevelt speed machine when it is confronted by foreign statesmen rather than by the home boys in Washington.

World Chamber Rap: Barriers to Commerce

VIENNA, June 3.—(AP)—After adopting 19 resolutions aimed at removing the barriers to world trade, the seventh congress of the International Chamber of Commerce closed today with an address by the new president, Frederick Feutner Van Vlassingen, Dutch industrialist.

He suggested that the governments might avoid untold economic grief by listening more closely to the voice of business.

One of the resolutions directed attention to the increase in armaments in the last four years. It warned that plans cannot be laid for economic improvement until conditions of peace and confidence have been restored.

Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the American section, expressed satisfaction with the progress made by the seventh congress. He viewed as particularly important the international chamber's unequivocal declaration against debt defaults and manipulations of money standards.

The site of the next congress will be decided later.

440 M. P. H. Air Speed Claimed by Italian

ROME, June 3.—(AP)—An unofficial air speed record at an average of 440 miles an hour was claimed today by Warrant Officer Francesco Agui, who flew 426.1 miles an hour April 10 and who is preparing for an official attempt soon in his famous "Red Bullet."

Prince Wilhelm Weds
Gir of 'Unequal Birth'Eldest Son of Former Crown Prince Loses Claim To German Throne in Marrying Commoner.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

BOON, Germany, June 3.—(AP)—Handsome Prince Wilhelm, eldest son of the former crown prince, married below his royal station today and thereby lost his claim to the German throne.

Disobeying a rigid "house law" of the Hohenzollerns which has been in effect since the fifteenth century, the prince, who will be 27 on July 4, took as his bride 25-year-old Dorothea von Salviati.

The marriage placed Louis Ferdinand, a youthful globe-trotter who has worked in the Ford automobile plant at Dearborn, Mich., in line for succession to the chieftaincy of the family. Louis Ferdinand is the brother of Wilhelm.

Should the Hohenzollern dynasty be restored to the throne, Louis Ferdinand and not Wilhelm would be the monarch. Immediately after the color marriage ceremony here, the Hohenzollern administration signed the change by publishing the following communiqué:

"Prince Wilhelm, of Prussia, on reaching his majority, renounced all rights derived from his position in the event of his entering upon a marriage that runs counter to the house law of the royal family. This eventuality has been realized by his marriage to Dorothea von Salviati."

Louis Ferdinand, who is greatly devoted to his grandfather, the former kaiser, will bow to the family law and will change his name to Wilhelm Friedrich Franz Josef Olaf—a baptismal name of the steel-helmet organization.

The bride's forebears were commoners from northern Italy. Declining to become Roman Catholics, they moved to Prussia during the reign of Frederick the Great.

The bride's father, Alexander von Salviati, followed the military life and became marshal of the court of Prince Olaf of Schaumburg-Lippe. He died November 7, 1910, of cancer, an old family of Hamburg merchant princes.

Whether or not the dynasty is restored, Louis Ferdinand, as the future chief of the house, will have the huge task of managing the Hohenzollern fortune and estates, scattered all over Germany and Holland, and will have to look to the material welfare of the entire family.

There was both a civil and a church ceremony today for Wilhelm and his bride. Guests attending the church ceremony were pleasantly surprised when Hubertus, the third son of the former crown prince, turned up to represent the dynasty. The Hohenzollern administration had intimated previously that a member of the family would attend.

The former kaiser, however, after representations had been made to him by advisers, and permitted Hubertus to be present. Louis Ferdinand, to whom seniority descended, was requested to stay away.

The bridegroom wore the uniform of the steel-helmet war veterans' organization and the bride was clad in a white wedding dress.

Uniformed steel-helmeted comrades of the bridegroom formed a guard beside the altar and before the church, where a huge cheering throng assembled.

Wilhelm's full name is Wilhelm Friedrich Franz Josef Olaf—a baptismal name of the steel-helmet organization.

The bride's forebears were commoners from northern Italy. Declining to become Roman Catholics, they moved to Prussia during the reign of Frederick the Great.

MACHADO'S REIGN
IS NEAR END,
ENEMIES BELIEVEDoom of Present Regime
To Come in Near Future,
Foes of President Convinced.

HAVANA, June 3.—(AP)—Revolution-born of island-wide discontent with the Machado administration and nurtured by the nation's youth—will sweep Cuba some day soon, its organizers say.

Sparking, thoroughgoing organization for that day goes forward steadily, secretly.

The movement counts supporters or sympathizers by the tens of thousands in every stratum of Cuban society. It has enlisted the energies of 15,000 of the youths of the land. It has secured that tacit sponsorship of patriots who recall the long bitter fight for freedom from Spain. It claims to say the leaders—18 per cent of the Cuban police, and counts on its side many soldiers and sailors. Businessmen, professionals, women and children swell its ranks.

Yet the task of preparation is slow and hard, and the end sought necessarily long in realization and the day, say those in the revolutionary organization's inner sanctum, is not far off.

The spirit flames, but money, arms and ammunition still are lacking.

Sporadic outbreaks of rebellion, such as April's in Oriente province and last week's in Santa Clara and Camaguey provinces, must not be regarded as fulfillment of "the plan," the leaders meticulously explain. They are important solely because they indicate that political and economic unrest, both helping to ripen the movement's followers are growing restless, finding it hard to await orders long in coming.

The government today, all advice reaching Havana tended to show, had the lid back on turbulent Santa Clara province. So far had the work of wiping out, scattering or conciliating the 35 to 400 rebels who took up arms last week progressed that military operations in the rebellious sector were suspended and troops in the field ordered back to their posts.

VATICAN CITY, June 3.—(AP)—President Niceto Alcala Zamora, of Spain, and other members of the Spanish government were automatically excommunicated from the Roman Catholic church today as the result of new Spanish religious laws described by Pope Pius as a "serious attack on religion and the church."

The excommunication was announced by the papal secretary of state after the pope had suddenly and dramatically issued an encyclical indicting the heads of the republican regime at Madrid of grave spiritual crimes.

Diplomatic circles here interpreted the strongly worded encyclical as a "declaration of spiritual war" and predicted that it would mark the beginning of a new era of diplomatic relations between Spain and the Holy See.

The pontiff addressed his manifesto to all the bishops in the world. He asserted that he was making no attempt to thwart political reforms, because the church accommodates herself to all forms of government and civil institutions, provided the rights of God and the Christian conscience are left intact.

Eight Charges Listed.

Eight separate charges were made against the Spanish republic, namely:

(1) The church and the state have been separated; the pope described this separation as a "most serious error."

(2) The Catholic religion has an odious watch set over its teachings in the school; the exercise of worship, religious possessions, the administration of sacraments to the dying and services for the dead have been hampered.

(3) The church has been stripped of all property and forced to pay a tax.

(4) Churches have been declared the property of the state.

(5) Religious congregations (clerical orders) have been deprived of the right to teach in the schools.

Orders Suppressed.

(6) Religious orders which vow obedience to an authority other than the state have been suppressed.

(7) A blow was aimed at the supreme authority of the church by the declaration that the "authority of the pope is not binding on the conscience of the faithful."

(8) Religious buildings have been seized in order to establish law schools.

In the manifesto, the pope said that the Spanish people have been "deceived" by the republicans, who have used "all legitimate means to nullify the hateful legislation."

The automatic excommunication was directed against over 100 members of the Spanish government and legislators, including the life-long Catholic President Alcala Zamora, who resigned his premiership in the first provisional republican administration because the Spanish congress voted the separation of church and state.

Paraguay has declared formal war against her larger inland neighbor, Bolivia, the casus belli being chiefly possession of the Gran Chaco region. The photographs show a Bolivian gun squad (left) and a Paraguayan battery.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Hostilities in the Gran Chaco, which have risen and fallen in intensity for 11 months, await only the cessation of the rainy season to acquire the dignity of real war.

Paraguay's recent formal declaration against Bolivia has changed the political aspects of the situation without affecting the immediate status of the fighting.

The possible exception would be air raids over the territory of either country beyond the limits of the vast wilderness which hitherto has been the theater of the clash.

Peace agencies of the world are moving now in an effort to halt the set-to. The difference between these efforts and previous campaigns toward the same end is also largely technical, for proceedings now would be based upon the formality of a peace conference.

The League of Nations, to which both warring republics belong, is enjoining its first experience with a formal war. The covenant of the League sets forth definite steps which may be taken in these premises and probably the first will be the dispatch of a commission.

This body, however, would have greater powers than the investigators who went to the Orient to look into the Sino-Japanese clashes over Manchuria. It probably would be composed of military attaches of neighboring states, empowered to propose an armistice and supervise its enforcement.

The League also may recommend that its members sever economic and financial relations with one or both of the warring states. Or finally it may recommend that the powers join in a punitive expedition against whichever country is deemed the aggressor.

The neutral commission of five nations with headquarters at Washington, is another agency that is moving to bring peace. In general it has collaborated with the League and probably will continue to do so.

Both the League and the United States and similar isolation measures by Chile, Peru, Argentina and Brazil also have been mentioned as possible cures for the flaming situation. These, however, are likely to affect Bolivia more than Paraguay.

The latter has access to the Paraguay river, an internationalized outlet to the sea. Bolivia must depend chiefly upon trans-Andean routes whose western termini are controlled by Chile and Peru.

LONDON, June 3.—(AP)—King George VI observed his sixtieth birthday anniversary today but was not attending a glittering military pageant in his honor.

Rather, the king of Wales was deputized to represent his majesty at the trooping of the color, the annual function on the horse guards parade to which the king is a member of the royal household.

The king is in good health, and many prayers were offered for his continued well-being. His ailing mother, the queen, is recovering from a long illness.

His attainment of the sixtieth milestone is in keeping with the long record of general among British rulers for, since 1714, when the first George took the throne, only two monarchs failed to reach that age.

They were George I and George IV, both being 67 years old at death. Edward VII, father of the present ruler, was 68 when he died.

The reign of George V—whose official title is "His Most Excellent Majesty George the Fifth, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India"—is also nearing the average length of rule since 1714, 27.7 years, for he is now in his thirty-fourth year of service on the throne.

The past year has been marked by his great interest in keeping in personal touch with the day-to-day affairs of his realm, as signified by frequent visits of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and others.

Such conjunctions, said Dr. C. C. Conroy, a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, have no astronomical significance, are noted particularly for their picturesque quality. They occur once in every 720 days, and tomorrow night they will be closer than usual.

To witness the conjunction, Dr. Conroy said, one should look slightly west and south of a point directly overhead, to see Mars, the smaller of the two, and Jupiter, one of the planets, which is a dull yellow, and brighter.

At their closest approach Mars and Jupiter will be 16 minutes of arc apart, or about half the apparent diameter of the full moon as seen from the earth. Mars will move eastward away from the brighter planet, but both will continue in their progressive eastward motion until they are in conjunction again.

Three-Word Decision Upholds Huge Suit

NEW YORK, June 3.—(AP)—It took only three words today for Supreme Court Justice William Howard Taft to refuse to dismiss a $100,000,000 accounting suit.

"Directors should direct," he wrote in disposing of motions to dismiss the suit against the directors of the International Match Company, a Krueger enterprise.

Dismissal was sought on the ground that the defendants were not connected with the company during the period in which the alleged wrongful acts were said to have occurred. Trial is now likely in the autumn.

The directors named as defendants were Percy A. Rockefeller, Frederick W. Allen, Donald Durant, Henry O. Havemeyer, Francis L. Higginson, Adrian H. Larkin, John McHugh and Samuel F. Pror.

VATICAN CITY, June 3.—(AP)—President Niceto Alcala Zamora, of Spain, and other members of the Spanish government were automatically excommunicated from the Roman Catholic church today as the result of new Spanish religious laws described by Pope Pius as a "serious attack on religion and the church."

The excommunication was announced by the papal secretary of state after the pope had suddenly and dramatically issued an encyclical indicting the heads of the republican regime at Madrid of grave spiritual crimes.

Diplomatic circles here interpreted the strongly worded encyclical as a "declaration of spiritual war" and predicted that it would mark the beginning of a new era of diplomatic relations between Spain and the Holy See.

The pontiff addressed his manifesto to all the bishops in the world. He asserted that he was making no attempt to thwart political reforms, because the church accommodates herself to all forms of government and civil institutions, provided the rights of God and the Christian conscience are left intact.

Eight Charges Listed.

Eight separate charges were made against the Spanish republic, namely:

(1) The church and the state have been separated; the pope described this separation as a "most serious error."

(2) The Catholic religion has an odious watch set over its teachings in the school; the exercise of worship, religious possessions, the administration of sacraments to the dying and services for the dead have been hampered.

(3) The church has been stripped of all property and forced to pay a tax.

(4) Churches have been declared the property of the state.

(5) Religious congregations (clerical orders) have been deprived of the right to teach in the schools.

Orders Suppressed.

(6) Religious orders which vow obedience to an authority other than the state have been suppressed.

(7) A blow was aimed at the supreme authority of the church by the declaration that the "authority of the pope is not binding on the conscience of the faithful."

(8) Religious buildings have been seized in order to establish law schools.

In the manifesto, the pope said that the Spanish people have been "deceived" by the republicans, who have used "all legitimate means to nullify the hateful legislation."

The automatic excommunication was directed against over 100 members of the Spanish government and legislators, including the life-long Catholic President Alcala Zamora, who resigned his premiership in the first provisional republican administration because the Spanish congress voted the separation of church and state.

OPPOSITION VOICED TO RECOVERY ACT

Manufacturers, Labor at Odds Over Provisions of Industry Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—(AP)—Hugh S. Johnson, administrator-to-be of the pending industrial recovery act, today lost a direct appeal to the National Association of Manufacturers for support of the legislation as sent to the capitol by President Roosevelt.

Shortly before the man chosen by the chief executive to wield the extraordinary powers contained in the bill went before the meeting of several hundred manufacturers here, resolutions had been approved insisting upon modifications and these demands remained unchanged.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and Robert L. Lund, of St. Louis, president of the manufacturers' association, took sharp issue over the labor clauses of the bill.

Green charged that the opposition of the association to the labor sections "places it in a most selfish as well as a most inconsistent position."

"They are consistent only in their traditional opposition to the exercise of the right of workers to organize into bona fide trade unions," the labor leader said in a statement.

"The manufacturers' association is willing that its members shall exercise the right to organize, to establish a closed shop so far as employers are concerned, under the protection of the government, but they are unwilling to accord labor the right to organize and to be represented by representatives of their own choosing."

Green said if the labor sections adopted by the house are eliminated or modified, labor would "appeal to its friends in congress to vote against the bill."

Lund, on the other hand, told newspapermen "the manufacturers have no desire to get an advantage over labor from this bill."

"We would prefer that the present situation between employer and employee continue," he said. "Our conception of the proper result from this bill would be that it would have no effect upon the present relations."

Asserting the legislation was designed "not as a labor act but as an industrial recovery act," Lund said "there is a very apparent desire upon the part of Mr. Green's organization to use this legislation as a springboard for organizing labor in one organization."

In adopting its resolutions, the manufacturers' association endorsed the stand taken by Lund and a steering committee of 25 headed by J. H. Rand Jr., of New York.

Modifications suggested—some of which have been approved by the senate finance committee in conflict with the measure as passed by the house—include:

Permissive authority for the president to curb imports to balance the increased cost of domestic production from higher foreign prices; limitation of the authorization for licensing industry if necessary to compel its cooperation; changes in the labor provisions "to make it clear that there is neither the intent nor the effect of reorganizing present mutually satisfactory employment relations, nor to establish any rule which will deny the right of employers and employees to bargain individually or collectively;" administration through a board instead of an administrator; purchase of American-made products under the public works section; and manufacturers' sales tax instead of the present levies.

COMMITTEE VOTES AGAINST SALES TAX

sue. Other taxes and estimates of revenue in his substitute are:

Tax on dividends deducted at source, $700,000,000.

Administrative changes to prevent private bankers from deducting losses on stocks and bonds held for years or less from ordinary income, and denying members of a partnership the privilege of charging off distribution shares of partnership losses, $15,000,000.

Gasoline tax increase of one-half of 1 cent a gallon, $62,000,000.

To Fix Oil Rates.

Among numerous bills today by the committee was one to apportion the $100,000,000 road grants to states on the basis of the present federal aid law—one-third on the basis of population, area and existing road mileage.

This would give greater consideration to the smaller populated states, as under the present law, the apportionment would be on the basis of one-half on population and one-quarter each on area and mileage.

In place of the present oil and gas regulation amendment which the committee refused to accept last night, the committee accepted an amendment by Gore, democrat, of Ohio, authorizing the president to initiate proceedings before the interstate commerce commission to regulate oil pipeline rates and to fix rates for transportation of oil and its products by pipeline.

Another amendment accepted would authorize the president to institute proceedings to prevent the acquisition of any holding company by such holding company which pipe line company by unfair practices or excessive rates in the transportation of petroleum or its products tends to create a monopoly.

These provisions were taken from the MacLennan-Carter oil bill, which the committee rejected, 17 to 3, last night.

GROVE CITY, Pa., June 3.—(AP)—James A. Farley, postmaster-general, today forecast the return of 2-cent postage on letter mail "within the next few weeks."

Farley said there are "unmistakable signs that the postal service is sharing in the business recovery which is now in the air."

He said that the postal service for April was "a little higher" than a year ago and that many cities are reporting still larger gains for May.

St. Philip's To Get Estimates On Pro-Cathedral This Week

An illustration of the pro-cathedral to be erected by Saint Philip's cathedral on the property at the junction of Peachtree road and Andrews drive.

Estimates for the erection of the pro-cathedral of St. Philip's, on the property at the junction of Peachtree road and Andrews drive, are expected to be received the first part of this week and a contract let so that actual construction will go forward and that the church will be ready for occupancy the first part of August.

The building is designed to accommodate a congregation of about 350, together with offices for the bishop and dean, Sunday school rooms, etc.

The equipment in the present cathedral, such as the altar, pews, etc., will be used in this structure.

The building is to be a frame structure but materials are being used, and the exterior and interior of the building is designed, in order to give an ecclesiastical effect, in a simple and dignified manner.

The beauty of the site will be enhanced by proper landscape work, preserving the existing trees and with the proper layout of drives, paths, etc., will give a setting to the temporary structure and finally the permanent cathedral that will be second to none in the country.

The plans for the pro-cathedral and the permanent cathedral are being prepared by A. Ten Eyck Brown, architect, and A. Barill Jr., associate architect.

ing was made known Friday by Captain Barnett in a long statement attacking the governor and his actions regarding the highway board.

Chief Engineer McWhorter and Seary B. Slack, bridge engineer, who also is one of those ordered dismissed by Governor Talmadge, will address a meeting of the Georgia section of the American Society of Civil Engineers at 12:30 o'clock Monday at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Mr. McWhorter will talk on "What the Highway Department of Georgia Has Accomplished," and Mr. Slack will discuss "The Low Cost of Bridges."

John E. Whitley, LaGrange contractor, a close personal and political friend of Governor Talmadge, who Friday was accused by Captain Barnett of urging the governor to attack the highway department, Saturday issued the following statement in reply to the board chairman:

"I note from this afternoon's Atlanta paper that Chairman Barnett, of the state highway board, still insists that the governor of the state of Georgia has no jurisdiction over the highway department of all."

The thing for Barnett to do is to operate the highway department according to the law and abide by the law and stop trying to be dictatorial; go to the state treasury and draw the money as approved by the governor in accordance with the law. Then it will be unnecessary for him to keep writing the same thing over and over again in the press and blaming me, Cowley Smith, or anybody else with his troubles.

Other road and bridge projects also are under scrutiny of the governor, but, of course, just what action he plans to take will not be known until the highway department submits a new budget, if it does. That a budget may not be submitted July 1 is considered a possibility, but no member of the board will discuss this phase of the situation at this early date.

However, it is known that Captain Barnett and his associates on the highway board feel that if they did follow the governor's orders and dismiss McWhorter and his fellow engineers, that the chief executive would order further eliminations. This feeling is for a group of clerks.

ROOSEVELT INITIATES WHITE HOUSE POOL

WASHINGTON, June 3.—(AP)—President Roosevelt early tonight took his first plunge into the new White House swimming pool.

Mrs. Roosevelt joined the chief executive in the first swim enjoyed by him since he left Warm Springs, Ga., before the inauguration.

The White House pool is located in the west terrace of the mansion, a wing leading from the main part of the house to the executive offices, which formerly was occupied by desk order further eliminations. This feeling is for a group of clerks.

Each of the three organizations urged that existing personnel be used in the administration of the act, referring specifically to extension forces already in the field.

Reduction Only Remedy.

The representatives of the textile industry, Mr. Callaway and Mr. Anderson, agreed in the statement that Senator Bankhead said that if a program of attack on this year's cotton crop is abandoned, cotton will drop to 6 or 7 cents this fall when the farmer takes his crop to the market.

Senator Thomas said that the farmers were 60 to 70 per cent back of a program for this year. Senator Thomas advocated development of some legislation for next year that would place cotton production on a quota basis and thus regulate the production. When the farmer has been shown what retirement of acreage will do to the price, Senator Thomas said, a quota allotment plan would be accepted.

Mr. Peek concluded the conference, answering a question raised earlier as to "who represented the farmer to the government to intervene on behalf of those who cannot act for themselves."

The agriculture department strongly urged cotton growers to take steps to curb their output in a report issued several hours after the conference.

"Present prices," he report said, "are not a safe guide in production than were those in the predepression years."

It added that "cotton farmers have for years have adjusted their acreage to past or planting-time prices rather than to price prospects and the practice has caused much trouble."

VOICED ON RAIL BILL IS LATER MONDAY

Measure Then Goes to Conference Before Final Congressional Action.

bor committees to discuss working conditions with three regional coordinating management committees, was adopted. The vote was 66 to 39.

The Harbun amendment repealing the reapture clause of the transportation act of 1920, which cancels $361,000,000 in government claims against railroads for excess profits, was adopted after the house rejected, 76 to 27, a proposal by Sabath, democrat, Illinois, to eliminate the proposition.

The house also approved a provision to place railroad holding companies under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission.

The measure provides that a federal coordinating committee of transportation shall effect economies in railroads by eliminating duplicating services and facilities, consolidating terminals, both freight and passenger, and eliminating waste in repair and other expenses.

Creates Three Committees.

Under the co-ordinator, three regional committees representing railroads in the east, west and south, respectively, are to be created. Labor organizations are permitted to create a committee for each region to consult with the management committee on working conditions, employment and other problems.

Consolidations of services made by the co-ordinator are not to result in the discharge of any employees to effect economies, but railroads are permitted, as at present, to lay off workers. Under the measure, however, the railroads are required to fill all vacancies by reduction in employees caused by resignations, deaths and retirements.

Although about 40 amendments were referred to the house, including one by Representative Beck, republican, Pennsylvania, to take the power of enforcement away from the co-ordinator. Another amendment by Martin, democrat, Colorado, to prevent the railroads from employing less than the number on their payroll in May, 1933, was rejected 60 to 34. This would have struck out the 5 per cent reduction in employees caused through deaths, resignations and retirements.

reduction in acreage is the only manner in which the unfavorable statistical position of cotton can be remedied.

Mr. Anderson, one of the south's most extensive textile operators, said the point that the destruction of existing crops was contrary to "sound economics" but that sound economics, so-called, had not resulted in bringing about a real recovery. "Emergency measures are justified," Anderson said, adding that the only way to raise the prices of cotton was to reduce the amount of available cotton.

Anderson discussed the processing tax feature of the measure, stating that it would reduce consumption of cotton goods by adding materially to the price.

This would make it obligatory, he said, immediately to impose compensating tariffs on all fabrics and materials which contain cotton that are imported into America.

Comment by Anderson.

"We do not seriously object to a processing tax for ourselves," Anderson stated, adding that such a tax could and would be passed on and that the result would be unfavorable to the entire program. Anderson expressed the opinion that the cotton reduction in acreage would sustain cotton prices.

Opposition to a program seeking to bring about the abandonment of this year's cotton acreage reduction came from two sources. John C. Thompson, a representative of the Texas ginners, and W. L. Clayton, prominent cotton exporter.

Clayton advocated a permanent program and asserted that the problem must be considered from a world standpoint. The question that must be decided, he said, is whether we are to produce cotton for the world trade or go on a domestic basis.

Clayton suggested that abandonment of American cotton acreage would result in an increase in foreign cotton production, which would mean that one of the principal objections to taking out 30 per cent of the cotton this year would be the resultant unemployment.

For four more years he would be unemployed than the president is seeking to recruit in his civilian conservation corps," Clayton said.

Editors Urge Action.

Farm paper editors advocated immediate action on an acreage reduction program. Dr. T. K. Wolfe, editor of the Southern Planter, said it would be "disastrous not to do anything for the cotton farmer this year."

Clarence Roberts, editor of the Oklahoma Farmer Stockman, agreed.

Senator Roberts asserted that farmers would respond almost unanimously to an acreage reduction program. W. S. Dowell, president of the New York Cotton Exchange, pledged his cooperation for any program undertaken.

Senators Smith, Bankhead and Thomas attended the conference, listened to the statements submitted by all branches of the cotton industry and the three agreed that something must be done for the cotton farmer this season.

Predicts Price Drop.

Senator Bankhead said that if a program of attack on this year's cotton crop is abandoned, cotton will drop to 6 or 7 cents this fall when the farmer takes his crop to the market.

Senator Thomas said that the farmers were 60 to 70 per cent back of a program for this year. When the farmer has been shown what retirement of acreage will do to the price, Senator Thomas said, a quota allotment plan would be accepted.

Atlanta Music Notes

By MOZELLE HORTON.

June finds formal activities of musical circles practically finished until September, but there are many informal musical gatherings that will take place from time to time during the summer that will continue to attract interest. Last week and next list scores of pupils' recitals, testimonials of a successful season.

A recent event that attracted wide attention was the production of "Pinafore," a Gilbert and Sullivan light opera, by the Agnes Scott Glee Club, assisted by 20 male voices of Atlanta and Decatur. An evening of delightful entertainment was furnished under the capable direction of Gussie O'Neal Johnson. She deserves much credit for her splendid work with this organization. C. W. Diekmann gave adequate support at the piano.

A bit of news about a new kind of piano has reached our ears, and it is an interesting bit, too. Realizing the demand for so many people for a piano that is good looking and small enough to fit in small room space, and still a capable musical sound box, an eastern manufacturer who was producing excellent pianos back in Civil War days comes out with a model that fills all the requirements. The spinet grand, as it is called, is really an old-fashioned square piano made smaller and brought up to date. The spinet grand fits into a small living room beautifully, and may be had in any period of furniture, thus harmonizing with the other furnishings. It will be interesting to watch how the public accepts this innovation in pianos.

A series of three studio musicals were presented by Mrs. Grace Lee Townsend at her home, 1530 Peachtree road, on May 27, 28 and 29. One of the musicals presented Little Marie Pappenheimer in a little recital. At this recital Mrs. Townsend played her first two piano pieces from her study copies. In the other musicals advanced pupils presented Collier Minor, Roy White, Maude Pickard, Gene Alice Banks, Maude Sewell, Helen Modie Unshaw, Ruth Dolk and Joe Sylvester Brown. Programs of vocal and piano numbers were offered.

JOHN HARWELL, 11-year-old pianist, whose home is in Opelika, Ala., was presented in recital by his teacher, Miss Evelyn Jackson, at her studio, 729 Peachtree avenue, N. E., last Wednesday evening. John Harwell is a youngster of remarkable talent, evidenced in his clean technique, his unusual poise, his thorough understanding of his pieces, and unusually beautiful tone. He has gone to Montreal, N. C., to spend the summer, studying with Mrs. Croby Adams.

MONROE CONLEY will present a group of her pupils in a program at the Old Ladies' Home Wednesday afternoon, sponsored by the College Park W. C. T. U. Another group will give a program at Base Hospital No. 45 on Friday evening, sponsored by the Hapeville Woman's Club. Many of Miss Conley's pupils are assisting in various recitals.

THE ATLANTA CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC will hold its annual commencement exercises on Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Eggleston Memorial hall. A musical program will be given and the presentation of diplomas. The summer session of the conservatory will begin June 12 and continue through July 22. Practically all the faculty will teach during the summer session. Next week schedules the recital of piano pupils of Mrs. John Ware, on Monday evening in Cable hall; and dance recital by the pupils of Eugene Dierker on Wednesday evening in Bass Junior High auditorium, and Ruth Cathey Smith will present her piano pupils in recital in Cable hall on next Friday evening.

JANE MATTINGLY was one of the 18 distinguished Georgia women placed on the honor roll at the historic luncheon given May 17 by the city federation of Columbus, Ga., as their contribution to the bicentennial celebration. The luncheon was given at the Country Club at Columbus. Jane Mattingly will present a group of pupils in piano recital on Tuesday evening, June 6, in the young people's auditorium of Druid Hills Methodist church. This is the third recital in a series being given by pupils of Mrs. Mattingly.

HUGH HODGSON presented a group of young artists from his Atlanta studio in a musical tea at his home, 14 Vernon road, Friday afternoon. Of interest to the musicians present was the performance of the entire 15 Bach two-part inventions.

Other numbers were Niemann's "Garden Music," Lucile Kimble and Irene Leftwich; first movement of "Waldstein Sonata," Beethoven, by Mrs. Edward Van Winkle Jr.; "Impromptu in A Flat," Schubert, Mozelle Horton; "Stude in A Minor," Chopin, Elizabeth Morgan; "Nocturne in E Flat Minor," Chopin, and "Minuet," Hodgson, by Frances Mitchell; "Serenade," Olsen, Lillian Clement, and "Cat and Mouse," Copland, and "Prelude," Debussy, by Tom Brumby.

Last week a group of Mr. Hodgson's pupils at the University of Georgia gave a recital in Atlanta for his Atlanta students. Appearing on the program were Wagner Alexander, of Jefferson; Margaret Spencer, of Savannah; Lois Pittard, of Marietta; Ruth McPeters, of Savannah; Nola Mae Dunaway, of Athens; Lucile Kimble, of Albany; Pauline Hadaway, of Athens; Mike McDowell, of Madison and Atlanta; Carolyn Anderson, of Starrsville; Sarah Roberts, of Monroe, and Elizabeth Orr, of Atlanta.

LULA BRAWNER has had her pupils' recital, but will continue her teaching through the summer, giving a late summer recital, and having other interesting summer features.

CLAUDIA HAYES presents two pupils' recitals, one in Clarkston on Saturday afternoon, June 3, and one in Decatur on Saturday afternoon, June 10. Miss Hayes gives her own piano recital on the evening of June 15, at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Jerry Taylor, 307 Clairmont avenue, Decatur. She will play numbers by Beethoven, Chopin, Smetana, Ireland, Debussy and Cyril Scott. Miss Hayes extends an invitation to anyone interested.

MARGARET HECHT will teach all summer, beginning her summer classes Monday. Miss Hecht's former pupil, Ed Kane, tenor, won the Schubert memorial contest, in Minneapolis last week at the convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs. The prize was $1,000, a concert in New York city with a symphony orchestra. Others of Miss Hecht's pupils are constantly singing over radio and for various musicals.

The University of Georgia makes announcement that Hugh Hodgson, eminent Georgia musician, will direct the music department of the summer school. Mr. Hodgson will give three courses—development of the opera, Bach, Beethoven and Brahms (a study of their literature) and history of piano music, with special emphasis upon teaching material. Mr. Hodgson will take a limited number of private pupils in piano and organ. He will be assisted by Irene Leftwich, who will also take a number of private students in piano.

L. G. Nilson, superintendent of music in the Atlanta public schools, will give two courses in public school music.

Clair Harper will teach violin and will be concertmaster of the opera orchestra. Mr. Bartsch, who has been at the summer school for a number of years, will teach voice and will also help in training the orchestra.

The operas "Martha" and "Faust" will be given July 12 and 14 under the general direction of Mr. Hodgson. Mr. Nilson leading the orchestra and chorus. Miss Edwina Eustis, stage director. As many of the students as are available will be used in chorus, orchestra and dance.

Every Thursday evening there will be a music appreciation program under the direction of Mr. Hodgson. On July 13 and 14 there will be a music teaching institute, under the direction of Mr. Hodgson. Beryl Rubinstein, director of the Cleveland (Ohio) Institute of Music, will be guest artist.

L. B. Waldrep Dies From Pistol Wound

On the eve of a new business venture in west Georgia, Larry B. Waldrep, 35, widely known former salesman of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company, was found dead in an office over his garage at 1565 Olympian circle, S. W., Saturday morning with a pistol lying near his hand. Attracted by the sound of the shot, members of the family and neighbors entered to find him on a cot.

Mr. Waldrep had completed plans to take over a business in West Point, members of the family said, following the severance of his connection with the hardware concern, and no motive for the suicide could be advanced by the family. He was a well-known Shriner and is survived, besides his wife and daughter, by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Waldrep, of Atlanta; five sisters, Mrs. W. N. Hargen, Mrs. Henry Daniel and Mrs. R. W. Caithern, of Atlanta; Mrs. R. S. Redwine, of Orlando; Mrs. E. C. Madden, of Baltimore, and two brothers, J. M. Waldrep, of Houston, Texas, and J. C. Waldrep, of Greenville, South Carolina.

Mrs. Mabel McNeil, Fulton county treasurer, Saturday declined to pay a bill of $190.96 incurred by the citizens' committee engaged in probing county affairs.

When presented by the committee, after approval of Judge Virgil J. Moore, Mrs. McNeil said she could not honor it because payment had been challenged in injunction proceedings brought in superior court and now on appeal. A conference with Judge Moore and the committee failed to alter her position.

The bill represented the expenses of preliminary investigations made by the citizens' committee. The grand jury will meet in special session at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon to consider a preliminary report on county affairs which the committee submitted to it Friday.

SCHOOL WILL HOLD EXERCISES TONIGHT

Shearith Israel religious school will hold its closing exercises tonight in the main auditorium of the Synagogue, 500 Washington street, S. W. The following students will receive diplomas: Helen Edelstein, Benjamin Franklin, Karl Garber, Jake Goldstein and Edythe Stein.

Rabbi Morris Max, of Savannah, will deliver the graduation address and Jake Goldstein will deliver the valedictory address. A gold medal will be awarded to the highest honor student in the graduating class.

SINGER WILL SHOW ELECTRIC MACHINES

The recently created electrically-operated Singer sewing machine will be given a demonstration on Monday in the company's quarters at 205 Peachtree street.

Free souvenirs will be given to visitors, and the place will be open until 9 o'clock at night.

The new machine sews forward and backward, and relieves the operator of the old exhaustive foot-power exertion.

News of Stage and Screen

EDITED BY RALPH T. JONES

Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone At Grand in "Looking Forward"

Another great role for Lionel Barrymore is afforded in "Looking Forward," the current attraction at Loew's Grand. And equally important is the role provided for that grand gentleman of the screen, Lewis Stone. They are the heads of two English families in "Looking Forward," the timely and immensely effective film for which President Roosevelt lent the title of his own great book on the current economic situation.

Barrymore is seen as an obscure clerk, who, after 40 years of loyal service, is forced by the depression out of his job. Stone is the head of the business which employed Barrymore—a proud owner of a great department store which, for over a century, has stood for the highest principles in business. Phillips Holmes is his son, Elizabeth Allen is his daughter, and Benita Hume is his frivolous second wife.

Colin Clive, as Stone's young assistant, is in love with Stone's flighty young daughter and their romance enlivens the appealing story of two strikingly different families, both facing readjustment to the hardships imposed by financial loss.

Bette Davis in "Hell's House" And Clever Stage Show at Fox

Bette Davis, the beautiful blonde who made her greatest bid for fame in "Ex-Lady," and Pat O'Brien, best known probably for his work as Hildy Johnson in "Front Page," are featured players, along with Junior Durkin, in "Hell's House," which opened at the Fox yesterday for a week, together with an excellent stage show supplied by Fanchon and Marco. Mel Ruick, master of ceremonies, is again presenting his Merry Musicians in a timely and topical musical offering, and Jimmy Beers, at the organ, is playing another popular program, including "The Rosary" and "Hold Me."

Chief of the acts in the stage offering is that of Benny Ross, supported by a beautiful redhead, Maxine Stone, in a song and comedy patter act, together with some clever impersonations of stage and screen stars. The Fox patrons will welcome the return of Gregory and Raymon, "nut musicians," with their offering of strange and unusual musical instruments, these being vacuum cleaners, rubber gloves and other unheard of vehicles of melody and fun. The act of Mills and Shea, comedy acrobats, will appeal especially to the youngsters. The Sun-Kissed beauty chorus offer another series of excellent dance and ensemble routines.

"Hell's House," the screen offering, is a story of hero worship gone wrong. Junior Durkin, in attempting to model his life after that of Pat O'Brien, a racketeer, gets involved with the law and is sent to a reform school. The heroic elements in the boy's character are brought out when he refuses to impeach his friend—the man for whom he has formed such a strong attachment—and suffers the ignominy of the prison for this mistaken idealism.

In the end, through the influence of Bette Davis, as the sweetheart of O'Brien, the tangled threads are straightened, and the forceful story ends on a note of hope for these youngsters who model their lives mistakenly on hero worship when there is no hero except in imagination. A newsreel, a comedy and a feature round out the Fox offering for the week.

Special Bookings Annual Kiddie Revue at Fox Made at Georgia To Buy Milk for Cripples

Manager Earle M. Holden, of the Georgia theater, announces a splendid lineup of screen attractions for the next few weeks. The coming Georgia attractions have been selected with an eye toward giving Georgia patrons great variety in entertainment.

Included among the pictures to be shown within the next three weeks are such attractions as "Life of Jimmy Dolan," starring Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Loretta Young; "Trick for Trick," a novel film with an all-star cast, in which a master magician shows the secrets that for years have baffled American audiences; "Lily Turner," starring Ruth Chatterton and George Brent; "Grand Slam," the long-awaited bridge burlesque with a special cast of players headed by Paul Lukas and Loretta Young; "Zoo in Budapest," "Blondie Johnson," starring the vivacious Joan Blondell, and several other attractions.

In addition to these features great care has been spent to surround each program with the most suitable short subjects, consisting of cartoons, novelty offerings and good two-reel comedies. Newsreels are always a part of the Georgia programs, and both Paramount and Fox Movietone news offerings are shown each week, a new issue on each Saturday and Wednesday, thus giving Georgia patrons the very latest in screen news. So far, the Georgia is the only Atlanta theater offering this service to its patrons, that of having two issues of news each week.

June Walton, charming little singer and dancer who will be in the Kiddie Revue at the Fox theater the week of June 10. Little Miss Walton is a pupil of Miss Jessie Reese. She was chosen "Miss Atlanta Jr." for 1932.

Next Saturday, June 10, one of the most important weeks in Atlanta's amusement calendar will make its annual bow at the Fox theater. The 1933 Kiddie Revue, with scores of the city's most talented child performers in its cast, will be presented for the entire week, with three daily performances and a special benefit showing on Sunday afternoon.

The revue is sponsored by the Masonic Club, for the benefit of the milk fund for the Scottish Rite hospital for crippled children. All week throughout the performances girls of the P. I. Club, a sorority which devotes much of its spare time to working for the less fortunate, will be in the lobbies and entrances to the theater. They will be dressed as milk maids, with their milk pails ready for contributions to the cause. The club is hoping that there will be plenty of dimes and nickels and quarters and dollars put in the pails, so that every patient at the hospital may have all the milk needed throughout the year to build bone and muscle and aid the doctors in their efforts to make the weak limbs strong and to restore the crooked legs and arms so that the little ones may face life without added handicaps.

Three of Atlanta's leading schools of dancing will have their pupils in the Kiddie Revue, which will be produced and directed by Miss Patsy Mason, producer of the internationally famous "Ideas" for Fanchon and Marco. There will be solo, group and ensemble dances, song numbers of young stars and by large choruses and there will be plenty of comedy. The show will move, as have all Kiddie Revues of the past, with speed, precision and pep and it will again excel in entertainment value even the finest of the professional offerings brought to the city.

The dancing schools represented are the Jack Rank school, the Gordon-Eppley school and the pupils of Miss Jessie Reese. Several score are in the cast and they have all been working hard to perfect their numbers for the show.

The first big rehearsal with the entire cast present will be held at the Fox theater at 10 o'clock Monday morning. At that time Miss Mason will begin her big task of co-ordinating the units of the show into a unified whole, in order that the show may be ready for the final dress rehearsal on Friday and the big opening on Saturday.

Dr. Claude Hughes, chairman of the milk fund committee of the Masonic Club, on Saturday stated the need was even greater this year than in the past. The business depression has had its effect upon the Scottish Rite hospital, just like other institutions. The hospital has been forced by lack of funds to limit the number of its inside patients to half the former number. The other children come daily for treatment, but live

"Undercover Man" Opens at West End

"Undercover Man" featuring George Raft and Nancy Carroll, comes to the West End theater Monday. It is the story of the underworld, with Raft in the role of a high-class crook. Constance Bennett will appear Tuesday in "Our Betters," a keen satire splendidly acted by a cast including Anita Louise and Gilbert Roland. "Air Hostess," feature for Wednesday, relates adventures and romance in the clouds with a cast headed by Evelyn Knapp, James Murray and Thelma Todd.

The West End offers for Thursday and Friday Charles Dickens' classic, "Oliver Twist." The atmosphere of the old English period has been marvelously caught in authentic settings and costumes; the camera and lighting are a joy to behold, and splendid character portrayals are given by Irving Pichel as Fagin, William (Stage) Boyd as Bill Sikes, Doris Lloyd as Nancy Sikes, Alec B. Francis as Brownlow, Barbara Kent as Rose and Dickey Moore as Oliver.

Edward Robinson at Georgia In Hilarious "Little Giant"

When an underworld big shot decides to turn gentleman, give up rum-running for tea dances, exchange his machine gun for books on philosophy and expensive etchings, trade his liquor trucks for polo ponies; when he begins to talk with a broad "a," lapsing into a bit of French now and then; when, in short, he makes up his mind to "muscle in" on society and be a millionaire among the millionaires, the result is likely to be hilariously funny.

It would be funny, even in real life. But when the gangster turns out to be Edward G. Robinson, as he does in his latest picture, "The Little Giant," playing all this week at the Georgia theater, you can settle back in your seat to follow his adventures with the prospect of amusing entertainment ahead.

"The Little Giant" may be regarded as a prophetic picture of what the bootlegger leaders who have survived the bullets of gangland, and who may have held on to their ill-gotten wealth, may do now that real beer has become legal in the United States.

However, "The Little Giant" is not a gangster story in the ordinary sense of the word. Far from being the deadly menace of society, Robinson plays the sucker to a family of alleged society folks to such a marked degree that "The Little Giant" may well be called Robinson's first comedy. After proving a boob in the hands of these

Stars Galore at Paramount In Funny "International House"

Paramount sets a new standard in beauty, fun and music in "International House" which opened yesterday at the Paramount theater. It's a hilarious production, starring the orchidaceous Peggy Hopkins Joyce, the screamingly funny W. C. Fields, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Colonel Stoopnagle and Bud, Rudy Vallee, Cab Calloway and his orchestra, the charming little radio performer, Baby Rose Marie. Such excellent trouper as Stuart Erwin, Sari Maritza, Bela Lugosi, Lona Andre, Sterling Holloway, Franklin Pangborn, Edmund Breese and Lumsden Hare carry the romance and comedy roles.

And there are songs, too. One sung by that inimitable Vallee, "Thank Heaven For You." Another, "My Bluebird's Singing the Blues," introduced by Baby Rose Marie, is a tune-full "hot" number.

"International House" packs a plot with a wallop, frisky from quip to quiver. Over in China in a town called Wu-hu, is a hotel called "International House," where Dr. Wong, played by Edmund Breese, has invented a radio-scope, one of those combination television machines that sees all, knows all, peeks around corners into peoples' bedrooms. To the hotel are flocking representatives of all great power companies to buy the machine.

Lumsden Hare, the British representative, is accompanied by his daughter, Sari Maritza. Bela Lugosi plays the Russian power executive. Stuart Erwin is the American, once engaged to Sari Maritza, but turned down because of his habit of acquiring such diseases as measles, chickenpox and mumps on the eve of his wedding.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, the world's best dressed woman, comes to Wu-hu in the hope of acquiring another millionaire.

Professor Quail, a cracked aviator, played by W. C. Fields, finds himself over Wu-hu. Peggy takes him for a millionaire, arousing the jealousy of Bela Lugosi, a former husband who refuses to recognize a Russian divorce. Stuart Erwin and Sari Maritza meet once more and resolve on marriage only to have Erwin come down with a case of measles again. The hotel doctor and nurse are Burns and Allen. Complications arise between Stuart and Sari, Peggy and Fields, the jealous Lugosi and everybody else in the hotel.

Bob Hess, the "Personality Organizer," is presenting as his feature number, the popular "Stormy Weather" in a special arrangement done in his inimitable style. Betty Boop is seen in "Betty Boop's Museum." And there is one of those subjects which prove unbelievable facts. "Strange As It Seems," and the Paramount Sound News.

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

John Gilbert in 'Downstairs' Has Strong Role at the Rialto

John Gilbert is the star of "Downstairs," one of the most remarkable stories ever filmed, which is the feature attraction now at the Rialto theater. Gilbert not only plays the central role in the drama picture, but is also the author. It is remarkable that, instead of the romantic hero roles he has hitherto essayed, he plays the part of a most despicable and unscrupulous villain in this play from his own pen.

It is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, and the cast includes, in addition to Gilbert, Paul Lukas, Virginia Bruce, Hedda Hopper, Reginald Owen, Olga Badanova, Rodi Hosing, Otto Hoffman, Lucien Littlefield and Marion Lessing.

The story is laid in a baronial home in Austria. The chief characters are the butler and his young bride, Gilbert, the chauffeur, and the cook. Gilbert, a newcomer to the household, first seduces the cook because of her life savings, which he steals. He then uses knowledge he has secured while driving the baroness to a rendezvous with a lover to exact blackmail and seeks to steal the butler's pretty young wife.

At the end just retribution overtakes the rascally servant in dramatic style and the picture closes.

Gorgeously Lovely Musical On First Run at Buckhead

Kiepara and Magda Schneider, stars of "Be Mine Tonight" at Buckhead all week.

"Be Mine Tonight," one of the most highly praised pictures released in months, has been secured by Manager Willis Davis, of the Buckhead theater, for first-run showing at his beautiful suburban house. It will be the feature presentation there all week, and it is extremely probable that, when word of its excellence gets around the city, it will be the smart thing, this week, to ride out to Buckhead in the cool of the evening and enjoy the marvelous piece of screen entertainment.

"Be Mine Tonight" offers something utterly different. At a special preview Wednesday morning, at the theater, before movie, art, music and other critics, heads of music schools and clubs and other notables, the presentation was acclaimed gay as the Mardi Gras, tuneful, intriguing, dashing and delightful entertainment. Charm it has no end and there never has been a screen treat like it for music lovers.

Europe was fine-tooth-combed for the best available talent for this superb Universal picture, produced by the brilliant young Russian, Anatol Litvack. If its huge appeal and attraction may be attributed to any one thing more than another credit handsome Kiepara, operatic tenor and excellent actor. This Polish young man, formerly of the Chicago Opera

'Oliver Twist,' as First Run, Plays Community Theaters

Scene from "Oliver Twist" where Dickie Moore, as Oliver, "asks for more."

One of the world's greatest classics, Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist," will open a three-day engagement Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Tenth Street, Palace, and DeKalb theaters and a two-day run Thursday and Friday at the West End and Fairfax theaters.

So familiar is the story to the vast army of theatergoers, that it is scarcely necessary to go into detail in describing it. Briefly, it concerns the adventures of an orphan, Oliver Twist, in the heartless metropolis of London. The boy, penniless and untutored in the ways of the city, falls in with a gang of crooks. How he is trained to be a pickpocket, fails to make good, is rescued by a benevolent old gentleman and climbs at last into an atmosphere of respectability and affluence, supplies the main thread of the story.

Prizes Offered for Wise Cracks

George Burns and Gracie Allen, who are never the less clever. Just to see how many incipient Gracie Allens there are in Atlanta, The Constitution and the Paramount will give ten pairs of guest tickets to the theater for the ten best "Gracie Allen" wisecracks. Contestants should write their wisecracks in the balloon spaces in the drawing at the head of the story, clip it out and send it to the manager, at the Paramount theater. Entries will close at noon Wednesday and the winning ten will be announced in The Constitution on Thursday morning.

S. R. O. by Ralph T. Jones

There can be no doubt that all who saw the performances by the Peruchi Players at the Erlanger last week thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The play was entertaining and well presented and the return of an orchestra—and such an orchestra—to the pit to provide music between the acts was utterly pleasing. And the soloists who sang from the pit were delightful. The only disappointment of the week was in a few of the audiences, which could, and should, have been larger. However, it will take a few weeks for Atlanta to learn just how good the Peruchi brand of entertainment and how easy on the pocketbook the Peruchi prices are. There should be a steady growth in attendance every week until the theater's capacity is reached from most performances. And the play for this, the second week, is the type to speed this increase. It is "Saintly Hypocrites and Honest Sinners."

The Pre-Viewer reported on "Looking Forward," now at Loew's Grand, several weeks ago. At that time he praised it highly. The preview remarks cannot be repeated here now, but it can be said that the picture is one of the exceptional things of the year, not to be missed by any wise moviegoers.

Manager Willis Davis, at the Buckhead, is showing another first-run at his popular suburban house this week. It is "Be Mine Tonight," one of the most exquisite and pleasing musical films ever made. It is surprising that the downtown theaters let it get away from them. However, that's the Buckhead's lucky break. The picture cannot be praised too highly and it will be a good idea, this week, to enjoy the breeze of a ride to Buckhead, see one of the best of films in a comfortable theater, and enjoy a second drive home again. By the way, it is the first time, in this film, that genuine suspense has ever been introduced into the singing of an operatic aria.

Sorry to see Eddie Gilmore leave the management of Loew's Grand. One swell boy, Eddie. But that's the business. You meet 'em, like 'em and lose 'em.

Another innovation in first-run offerings is noted in the coming, this week, of "Oliver Twist," to a group of community theaters for its first Atlanta showing. See the daily programs, for when it shows at the Tenth street, DeKalb, Palace, West End and Fairfax. It is a perfect screening of the immortal story by Dickens and should not be missed, on any account.

Manager Earle M. Holden, of the Georgia, is away on two weeks' vacation. He has left grand entertainment this week in "The Little Giant" with Edward G. Robinson. And Assistant Manager John Schultz will undoubtedly prove his spurs in the absence of the boss.

Are you all set for big news? The annual Kiddie Revue opens at the Fox theater next Saturday. Scores of Atlanta's cleverest child performers will present the snappiest stage show of the year, as a benefit for the milk fund of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children. It's a grand show and a grand cause. Make a date now, go out and enjoy it, and then give and give and give so that the little cripples may have gallons of milk apiece on which to grow strong and straight and well.

DIARY OF A PRE-VIEWER.

SUNDAY NIGHT—To the Tenth Street to see "Oliver Twist." A great picture for the year from a classical standpoint. This version of Dickens' novel, with Dickie Moore, one of the greatest of child actors, playing the leading part, has a dramatic appeal for every member of the family. The acting of Doris Lloyd, as Nancy Sikes, is superb—you hate her, then love her. Included in the cast are Irving Pichel, as Fagin; Alec Francis, as Brownlow; William (Stage) Boyd, as Sikes; Barbara Kent, as Rose Maylie, and Sonny Ray, as the Artful Dodger. You'll enjoy it whether or not you've read the book from which it is adapted. But who hasn't?

WEDNESDAY—"Hell's House," at the Fox. Junior Coghlan and Junior Durkin and Pat O'Brien in a story about a boy's reform school. A picture with a purpose, but one that is slightly illogical in places. Surely we don't have such obtuse judges in juvenile courts, do we? However, it is interesting entertainment and will hold your interest throughout, with a fine close and plenty heart appeal.

WEDNESDAY—"Be Mine Tonight," at the Buckhead. This is supremely fine entertainment. A comic opera of the screen. Or perhaps opera bouffe. The story of a youth gifted with a gorgeous tenor voice and his infatuation for a lovely girl. The story of a lovely rascal who nearly wrecks the course of true love. The story of youth's universal dream and its fulfillment. The singing is gorgeous. Kiepara, the tenor, has a voice to thrill you to the core and he is given many opportunities to use it. Magda Schneider, the heroine, is a lovely young miss of 19. You'll fall in love with her yourself. By all means, see it.

THURSDAY—To the Paramount to see "International House." This has nearly every available star to be found in the cast. (See advertisements.) It is screamingly funny in places, chiefly when W. C. Fields is in the screen, which, fortunately, is most of the time. Lots of radio favorites sing and play for the customers and some, notably George Burns and Gracie Allen, are important personages of the cast. As for the story, it is just a hodge-podge of nonsense, but that doesn't matter. Perhaps, inasmuch as the scenes are laid in China, it is chop suey.

FRIDAY—"Downstairs," with John Gilbert, at the Rialto. You may remember that some weeks ago this production was highly praised in the national magazines. The story was written by Gilbert himself and he seized the opportunity to quit his usual role and play the villain. And a most villainous villain it is. The story centers around the loves, jealousies, comedy and tragedy of the servants' quarters in a great baronial home in Austria. It is splendidly made and boasts a great cast in addition to Gilbert. Note Hedda Hopper, Virginia Bruce, Olga Badanova, Paul Lukas, Lucien Littlefield, etc. It is an M-G-M, and, my friends, very well worth seeing.

COMMUNITY'S BOOK "SIGN OF THE CROSS" The community theaters, Tenth Street, DeKalb, Palace, West End and Fairfax, offer another film tribute to the first three days of next week, June 12, 13 and 14, it was announced Saturday.

Peruchi Players To Present Play of Small Town Life

One of the most successful plays in the repertoire of modern stock companies has been chosen for the second week's production by the Peruchi Players at the Erlanger theater. "Saintly Hypocrites and Honest Sinners" is the title. It is a story of a village church, with the action centering around the efforts of two deacons to control every word and action of the young minister. It is filled with searching characterizations and has caused more comment and discussion, probably, than any play of recent years. In many cities where it has been produced it has been necessary to extend the original run for a second or third week and it has been the theme of innumerable pulpit discourses by ministers who have seen and enjoyed it.

C. D. Peruchi, operator of the Peruchi Players, has himself produced the play in half a dozen southern towns and he counts it as just about the most entertaining, from the audience viewpoint, of anything he has ever done.

It is a play replete with what are known on the stage as "fat parts." This means roles so sharp cut in their delineation of human character that actors delight in playing them. All the members of the Peruchi organization who made splendid personal successes in "What Price Woman?" last week, have splendid parts in the new play. Grant Gordon, the handsome leading man, is the young minister. Gordon Peters, Mildred Peters, Mary Ann Dentler, Klock Ryder, Mr. and Mrs. Peruchi and other players will score new successes this week.

Once again Walter Sheats will conduct his novelty orchestra in the pit, with his musicians and vocalists providing snappy music and harmony singing before the first curtain and during the waits between acts. It is the boast of Mr. Peruchi that there is never a dull moment at his shows and, with the aid of the orchestra and singers, he makes good that boast in no doubtful manner.

There will be the usual performances, nightly at 8:15 and Wednesday and Saturday matinees at 2:15. And the remarkably low prices which the Peruchi Players have inaugurated for stock in Atlanta will again prevail. Top price for night performances is 40 cents, with excellent seats available at 25 cents. Matinee prices are 25 and 15 cents.

And on Monday night, again, ladies will be admitted free when accompanied by escort with paid, reserved seat ticket.

The box office is open daily at 10 o'clock, when seats for any performance of the week may be secured.

CHURCH BUILDING WILL BE MARKET

The old Baptist church building at 563 Edgewood avenue, near Elizabeth street in Inman Park, will be converted into an up-to-date market.

J. T. Barfield, experienced in this line, will conduct the market. It will be a farmers' market on the plan of the Municipal Market, and will handle produce.

The A&P will install a grocery store, and W. A. Gatlin, expert meat man, will be in charge of the meat market. Various dealers will stage their produce in booths.

Mr. Barfield said he had found one of the best locations in Atlanta, and hoped to get the extensive trade traveling out Edgewood avenue to various points in the DeKalb area.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS OUTING SEASON TO OPEN JUNE 17

The annual outdoor campaign season of the Atlanta Camp Fire Girls will open at the Toccoa camp, June 17, and be continued at least six weeks, it was announced Saturday. If enough girls participate in camp activities the camping season will be extended to eight weeks.

H. H. Trout, chairman of the organization's committee on camping Saturday issued the following statement to parents of girls who are to attend the camp:

"The summer camp program is as old as the pioneer and as new as the most progressive school. It is a back-to-nature movement. It borrows the best from those unassuming naturalists the Indian and the settler. It is organized on the plan of a large family. The furnishings are pine woods, the old swimming hole, animal tracks, stars overhead, a sturdy rock and glowing embers. The campers share worthwhile friends, health-giving sunlight, knowledge of the open, unfailing energy, the goodness of sleep and the delight of wholesome food. These are essentially the kingdom of youth.

"The child setting out for camp has a job to do. She is going to learn how to live with others. She is going to be her best self as she wants to make good with the other campers. Her parents are sending her to a laboratory of human relationships. In her own mind she is definitely bound on the most interesting adventure of her life."

HISTORY OF LAMAR TO BE PRESENTED TO GEORGIA TODAY

The formal presentation of the Lamar county history to the state of Georgia will be made Sunday afternoon at Rhodes Memorial building, the Georgia state department of archives and history, Mrs. E. A. Fish, of Gainesville, formerly of Barnesville, business manager of the history, and Mrs. Augusta Lambdin, editor, will present the book to Miss Ruth Blair, state historian. A reception will be held later, honoring all county historians in the state who have completed their volumes.

The Lamar county history was printed by the Barnesville News-Gazette, of which Benjamin Hardy Jr. is editor. The book contains 48 pages of rotogravure which is being printed by the Ruralist Press of Atlanta. Mrs. Augusta Lambdin and Mrs. E. A. Fish were appointed by the Lamar county grand jury in 1928 as official county historians, and they have been at work on the volume since that time. It contains 500 pages. Although the county is only 13 years old, Mrs. Lambdin gives in detail the history of all phases of the territory before it became Lamar, when it was parts of Pike and Monroe counties, also of Barnesville and Gordon Institute. Mrs. Nell Joy, of Milner, and the late T. J. Hunt, of Milner, and many others have assisted in writing of the county districts, and Miss Lillian Mitchell has been the assistant editor.

One of the most valuable portions of the book is the biographical section devoted to the family histories of the county's most prominent citizens, and a section on "dedicated" the Georgia bicentennial, giving potent facts, poems, maps and other information to date.

Mrs. Harris will make an informal talk on her book, "A Circuit Rider's Wife," the partly autobiographical story that ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post nearly 25 years ago. Printed later in book form, it has continued to be a widely read book, arousing much local as well as nationwide comment.

Known to thousands of readers for her brilliant writings, Corra Harris is equally famous among her many friends as a brilliant and witty conversationalist and speaker. Her literary ability has been publicly acknowledged by several leading universities, the degree of Doctor of Literature having been awarded her by Oglethorpe University, Rollins College and the University of Georgia.

In recognition of the fine record which Miss Stephens set, school officials gave her a trophy consisting of a shield and a rosette set with precious stones.

Miss Stephens made a splendid record in all classes, teachers said, and is considered one of the outstanding graduates of the institution.

More Trucks for Stone Baking Co.

To their fleet of 36 delivery units which serve O'Boy bread and Stone's butter-made cakes out of the Atlanta plant, the Stone Baking Company found it necessary to add three new International trucks, pictured here. The company reports a large, steady increase in their business, which is shared alike by both their fresh-baked-daily breads and Stone's cakes. F. O. Stone, cake specialist, who personally supervises this latter department, stated that the exclusive idea of dating all Stone's cakes, a policy originated by him over 20 years ago to guarantee freshness, has been met with widespread public appreciation, particularly emphasized since this feature has been more generally made known through advertising in The Constitution.

Mars To Pass Jupiter Tonight In Big Sky Race, Says Therrell

An olympic of the skies will be climaxed tonight at about 8:30 o'clock when a celestial race between Mars and Jupiter will be decided in the southern skies, according to D. M. Therrell, of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, who said the race began April 10 when both planets took up their position in their orbits toward the east. Saturday night, he said, Mars was only a nose behind Jupiter and presented a view almost uncanny in its beauty.

The race between the two planets—among the nearest to the earth—has attracted wide attention and furnished a sight which may never be seen by those living, Mr. Therrell said. Mars is 4,000 miles in diameter and with the exception of Venus is the earth's nearest neighbor, being many million miles away.

On the other hand, Mr. Therrell explained, Jupiter, next to the sun, is the largest inhabitant of the solar system, being 86,000 miles in diameter as compared with the earth's diameter of about 8,000 miles. Jupiter is about 390,000,000 miles from the earth.

Mars, Mr. Therrell said, is between the earth and Jupiter and revolves in his orbit around the sun once in 687 days, while Jupiter travels in his orbit around the sun once in 4,380 days, or about once in 12 earth years.

The celestial race will be visible near the moon tonight and Mars will overtake his giant brother and present a sky-view of unusual brilliance. They will be in closest conjunction at about 8:30 o'clock and perhaps never again in an age occupy their same near positions.

Lowest prices in Chrysler history

THINK OF IT . . . today you can buy a Chrysler Six Sedan for $785 . . . a big, luxurious, four-door model with 83 horsepower and 117-inch wheelbase, and all that Chrysler alone gives in quality, performance and long life.

And the Chrysler Royal Eight Sedan—90 horsepower—120-inch wheelbase. . . . Imagine it for only $925! . . . Never before such an eight for so little money.

Also, the magnificent Chrysler Imperial Sedan, with a host of luxury features—108 horsepower—126-inch wheelbase—the most coveted of fine cars—only $1295.

Never before has the name Chrysler meant so much in advanced engineering, flashing action, eye-compelling smartness. Never before in history has it been possible to buy the finest of fine cars at anything like these prices.

Sensational prices—yes! But even more sensational is what you get for the low price you pay.

Patented Floating Power engine mountings . . . Safety all-steel bodies . . . hydraulic brakes . . . Oilite squeak-proof springs . . . alloy steel valve seats that practically eliminate valve grinding . . . T-slot pistons that outwear the average car . . . and scores of other features.

Now is the time to enjoy a Chrysler, and today is the time to buy it.

On the Air Today

A dramatization of one of the greatest short stories in Hungarian literature will be presented by the Columbia Dramatic Guild in its broadcast over the WABC-Columbia network and WGST from 7 to 7:30 o'clock tonight. It is "The Invisible Wound," by Karoly Kisföldi.

Pedro de Cordoba, stage and screen star, will return to the cast of "Roses and Drums" for an episode over the WABC-Columbia network and WGST from 4:30 to 5 o'clock this afternoon.

De Cordoba will join a cast that already includes Guy Bates Post, Minor Watson, George Gaul, Reed Brown Jr. and Elizabeth Love.

The immortal "D Minor Symphony" by Cesar Franck, still voted the most popular work of its kind by symphony audiences, will be featured by Howard Barlow, conductor of the Symphony hour, from 1 to 2 o'clock this afternoon over WGST and the Columbia network.

Melodies ranging from the colorful Spanish mood of Fuhrmann's "Fiesta de los Gitanos" to the typically Russian "Scherzo" from Tschikovsky's "Sixth Symphony" will be offered in the program. Andre Kostelanetz Presents, from 7:30 to 8 o'clock tonight over WGST and the Columbia network.

It isn't muscle alone that makes John Henry such an unusual man. He manages to think a little faster than most of the rousters and gandy-dancers with whom he exists his lot. When his great, booming voice is heard in the forty-first episode of "John Henry—Black River Giant," over the WABC-Columbia network and WGST from 8 to 8:15 o'clock tonight, the radio audience will find out how he keeps a gang of convicts working in a "mud patch" from "quidn" themselves by trying to escape.

Evan Evans, tenor; Betty Barthell, soprano, and William O'Neal, tenor, will be the soloists on the Columbia Revue broadcast over the WABC-Columbia network and WGST at 8:15 o'clock tonight.

Mark Warnow's orchestra and a vocal quartet will furnish a "Bright Interlude" of currently popular selections from 3:15 to 3:30 o'clock this afternoon over the WABC-Columbia chain and WGST.

Jacques Fray and Mario Braggiotti will turn to sentiment and romance during their two-act recital over WGST and the Columbia chain from 5:30 to 5:45 o'clock this afternoon.

200 TO START SURVEY OF GEORGIA FORESTS

About 200 engineers and assistants will start work surveying lands to be purchased by the United States forest reserve before July 1, according to announcement by L. F. Bellinger, secretary and treasurer of the Georgia section of the American Society of Civil Engineers. The work will last for six months or longer, he said, and workers will be selected largely from localities in which the work will be done.

Mr. Bellinger said he had received information that 30 parties of 12 each would be put to work surveying forests in New England and the south. The southern groups, of which there will be 17, will work in Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina and South Carolina. Pay scales will range from about $800 to $2,000 a year and surveyors—preferably young men—may obtain appointment blanks from Mr. Bellinger.

WJTL WILL CONTINUE CLASSES IN GERMAN

In order to carry on radio educational work, WJTL, Oglethorpe University station, has run a line into the home of Dr. H. J. Geertner, just off the campus, and his classes in German will go on uninterrupted during the summer session of the school, according to announcement by Dr. Thorneill Jacobs, president of the university.

Commenting on the course in languages, Dr. Jacobs said he had found that radio was an ideal medium because the student could concentrate on accent and tone as it comes out of the loudspeaker, instead of dividing attention to the physical appearance of the speaker.

made by the finest Jewish artists of the state will be given by WJTL at 12:45 o'clock today in what is said to be the only featured Jewish program given by a radio station in the south.

Hardy Crussella, violinist, will give the regular Sunday broadcast for the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs over WSB at 5:15 o'clock this afternoon, with Miss Edna Whitmore at the piano.

New Cotton Used In Making All Kelly-Springfields

How an improvement in tire-building is acting to the advantage of one of the country's greatest products, cotton, was described today by John H. Holland, of the Holland Tire Co., local Kelly-Springfield dealer.

"In the making of Kelly-Springfield tires," he said, "a development has been made which requires a superior grade of cotton. This is more expensive than the ordinary cotton used in other tires, and consequently means a higher return to the cotton grower. Since Kelly-Springfield is one of the largest manufacturers of automobile tires in the world and the amount of cotton they require is considerable, a vast premium is paid by them to the raisers of the superior cotton."

"This product is known as corkscrew cotton. It is far kinder than the usual cotton, grips and holds, and when woven into cord fabric is almost indestructible.

"The importance of such cotton in the construction of tires cannot be overemphasized. For the average passenger car tire about four pounds of cotton are required. Since the strength-giving cords are made of cotton, it must be of the finest kind obtainable. If it is not, the cords gradually weaken under the continuous thrust and strain of modern driving, and blowouts result."

"The use of corkscrew cotton is one reason why Kelly-Springfield tires are really 'fatigue-proof.' Built of the toughest materials throughout, they withstand shocks far longer than any other make of tire. Yet, owing to efficient manufacturing practices, they cost no more than ordinary tires."

Elks Tour Car To Arrive At Firestone Store Today

Two dazzling purple-and-white official Elks good-will cars, en route to the grand annual convention at Milwaukee, will arrive here in a few days and stop for some time at the Firestone service store, Peachtree at Baker, local Firestone dealer. Bailey Allen said for the great cross-country grind Firestone equipment was chosen again this year, due to their extraordinary performance on similar tours in 1931 and 1932, as well as the fact that Firestone tires hold all world records for safety, speed and endurance.

The official car is one of six which will travel throughout the country, two leaving from Tallahassee, Fla., two from Los Angeles and two from New York city. More than 200,000 Elks will be contacted during their journeys.

All of the cars have a crowded itinerary, stopping in many cities. Their schedules of stops are worked out in advance and must be maintained in spite of rain, heat, road construction, flood or any condition that would best a less determined driver with less rugged equipment. They hit a pace of approximately a mile and a half a minute over the great open spaces. The new white sidewall high speed heavy duty tires add to the striking appearance of the white-and-purple cars. The size of the tires is the same as those used on the cars at the Indianapolis Speedway, where Firestone-equipped cars have won for 14 consecutive years.

"The work of Firestone engineers in pioneering tires that stand the terrific 500-mile grind has led the way to methods which have provided greater safety on important missions over the highways and for all motorists."

Mr. Allen said, "The Firestone patented gum-dipping process, which insulates every fiber of every cord, minimizes the heat of internal friction, the greatest enemy of tire life. The two extra gum-dipped cord plies under the tread are another development which brought greater adhesion between the tread and body of the tire and increased protection against punctures and blowouts.

"The racing speeds of yesterday are the speeds of the highway today. Any of the six Elks lodge members who pilot these good-will cars might only need for one instant the extra strength and safety built into Firestone tires, but at that instant it will be vital for him to have the strongest and safest tires built—Firestone tires, the tires of champions."

VERSE-CRAFT FEATURES WELL-KNOWN POETS

Featured with a sonnet sequence by the editor, Lawrence W. Neff, and numerous nature and life poems by well-known poets, the current issue of Verse-Craft, a bi-monthly poetry magazine published in Atlanta, has been placed in circulation. The format of the attractive magazine is unusually arresting and the contents represent some of the best minor verse written today.

In the current issue is an announcement that Carolyn Pierce Dillard has become connected with the magazine as an associate editor. She is well known in southern literary circles and has produced a number of plays. She is the daughter of Dr. Alfred M. Pierce, former pastor of the Druid Hills Methodist church, now of Macon, and is an alumnus of Wesleyan and Randolph-Macon colleges.

MORE PEOPLE BUY BUICKS THAN ALL OTHER EIGHTS IN ITS PRICE RANGE COMBINED!

BECAUSE BUICK GIVES MORE AND BETTER MILES

Every state in the Union purchases more Buicks than any other automobile priced above $1,000.*

There are 600,000 more people driving Buicks than the next most popular car in Buick's price range.

Five times as many people buy Buicks as any other car priced above $1,000—sixes, eights, twelves or sixteens.*

Nearly nine out of ten—89 per cent—of the 1,300,000 Buick owners say they will buy Buicks again.

Every city with a population of 125,000 or over buys more Buicks than any other car priced above $1,000.*

Hill and traffic performance? Yes—beyond every other stock-car in the world. But every proof of Essex Terraplane performance is also proof of Terraplane stamina and ruggedness.

Terraplanes stand up and perform so well because they are unit-built. They are the lowest-priced cars in their respective classes because Hudson unit-construction is more efficient—engineers say it is the biggest advance in motor-car building in 15 years.

Just drive the new, larger Terraplane Special Six, with 113-inch wheelbase—the biggest, roomiest, longest car in the lowest-price field. Here is genuine big-car room and comfort at small-car cost, with Terraplane performance, stamina and operating economy. A car you can't afford to miss, no matter how big and costly a car you've been used to.

46 OFFICIAL A. A. RECORDS PROVE TERRAPLANE RUGGEDNESS

One after the other, 46 official records have fallen before the attack of the modern young giants of the motor world, the Essex Terraplane Six and Eight.

A Clean Sweep from Florida to Connecticut

Since February 22nd, Terraplanes have broken every official record in the East and South from Florida to Connecticut, under the personal supervision of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association.

These records include 12 at Daytona Beach for speed, acceleration and endurance; Lookout Mountain, Signal Mountain and the official hills in Tennessee, Maryland and Virginia. The all-time records for the famous Fort Lee Hill up the New Jersey palisades, and the old reliable Fort George Hill in New York City were also broken easily.

Old Reliable Beaten Again
The Fort George Hill, still paved with cobblestones as it was when the first automobile tried its mettle more than a generation ago, has been the scene of probably more hill-climbing contests than any other hill in the country. The Terraplane hung up a new all-time official record there on April 20th for all stock cars in history, regardless of price.

The Terraplanes have not yet found a hill-climbing record which they failed to break on the first try.

AN IGNOBLE EXIT.

Iceland, the last of the "noble experiment" countries, is to vote on repeal this summer, and there is little doubt that it will follow the example of the other countries which have repealed their drastic prohibition laws after finding out that they defeated the very end for which they were enacted.

This tiny country, located far off the beaten track of world commerce and travel, will vote on the question of repeal because prohibition has worked there like it has everywhere else, with liquor being bootlegged in wholesale quantities.

That is why the people of the United States have revolted against conditions resulting from the enactment of an unenforceable law.

Here in Georgia, the courts are flooded with cases resulting from the impotent efforts at enforcement.

But the whole problem seems now to be on the way to solution through the early repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

The first eight states to vote have, by overwhelming majorities, spoken in favor of repeal. The proportionate majorities have been about the same in the thickly populated states of the east and in the thinly settled states of the west.

Eight more states will act during this month and 13 others by the end of September, making a total of 29 which will have voted by October 1. During June, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Indiana, Illinois, West Virginia, Iowa and California will hold their referendums. These will be followed during July, August and September by Maine, Oregon, Washington, Vermont, Minnesota, Idaho, New Mexico, Alabama, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Maryland.

It will not be surprising if all the 21 states still to vote this summer should go solidly for repeal, despite the fact that dry leaders are hoping for victory.

In past years a militant and powerful dry vote has been registered in the rural districts of upper New York and it was predicted that large majorities against repeal would be cast in these districts. Instead, the result of the referendum showed that the dry vote had dwindled to such an extent that not even a creditable showing was made against the tide of repeal sentiment.

A similar result obtained in the referendum in Delaware where, although dry leaders had confidently predicted that the wet vote in the cities would be overcome by an avalanche of dry votes in the rural sections, every section of the state spoke decisively for repeal.

So it seems that the "noble experiment" is about to go.

If the law had been enforceable, good would have come of it; but the public rebelled. So it has done harm, instead of good, to the cause of temperance.

The use of liquor has spread into the homes and to classes of society—women, young people and even church members—to an extent not before known.

It has made miniature breweries of home kitchens and turned the running branches of the country into small distilleries.

It has created an illegal industry, the total annual turnover from which runs into billions of dollars, but from which the government has received no revenue, while a great army of bootleggers have grown rich.

Despite the handwriting on the wall produced by the results of test elections last summer and fall, the tide of sentiment has turned more quickly and more definitely than was expected.

The repeal amendment of congress allows seven years for the expression of the states, but every indication now points to the fact that repeal will be effected in less than a year from the time of the enactment of the referendum measure.

The tree of knowledge has left many people out on a limb.

ECONOMY IN THE SCHOOLS.

An economy move by the Fulton county public school system, under which nearly $50,000 will be saved to the parents of the county's school children, is described in a communication, appearing on the opposite page, from Superintendent Jere A. Wells.

By the new rental fee plan for handling textbooks and school materials each pupil in the system will be saved from $2 to $4 each year. This is made possible by the fact that these books and materials will be bought in bulk by the board, instead of at retail by the pupils, as heretofore, and the pupils will receive credit for the books they return at the end of the scholastic year.

The adoption of this plan by the Fulton county system is a striking illustration of the opportunities to lessen the burden of school expense, through the elimination of waste and the introduction of businesslike methods, with which every school board in the country is faced.

No business concern would each year throw away much of its working material when it could be saved and put to just as good use in future. The same principle applies to the work of the schools, and the county school system has wisely and properly put it into effect to bring about a worth-while saving to the parents of Fulton's school children.

Under the direction of an able board, headed by Cam Dorsey, and of Superintendent Wells, the county system has functioned in a manner that furnishes an example of splendid service, rendered at the lowest possible expense.

The instruction received and the physical equipment of the county school system compare with those of any similar system in the country, despite the fact that its cost to the taxpayers is far below that of other systems.

This has been accomplished by keeping salaries from its pay rolls, holding salaries within a reasonable limit, and insisting upon every employee of the system rendering full and efficient service for his or her salary.

A cry is going up from school systems all over the country for more revenue to meet "mounting costs." Such demands, which can be met only by increased taxation at a time when it is emergently necessary that taxes be reduced, would be unnecessary if these systems were put on the same basis of businesslike efficiency as that on which the Fulton county system is operated.

One should dress to suit his purse, says a stylist. It sounds like an invitation to join a nudist colony.

RECORD-BREAKING MIGRATION.

Commenting on the back-to-the-farm movement, the Literary Digest observes that "a vast procession of millions moves unseen, unheard—back to the farm."

This national news review publication points out that this movement has outdone the great migrations of history and the "huge movement of two million American soldiers to France that stirred our nation to the depths is equaled as two million Americans go from city to the land in 1931-32."

Unemployment in the cities and food on the farm are given as the motivating forces of the great trek which has to a large extent, although by no means entirely, balanced the trek from the farms to the cities during the industrial boom years previous to 1929.

Now, according to the Literary Digest, the farm population of the country has reached 32,242,000, the largest in the history of the United States.

Unfortunately, this swelling of the farm population to the highest total known is not true of the south, where hundreds of thousands of fertile acres, comprising farms abandoned during the trek-to-the-city period, still lie idle in each state.

Many counties in Georgia have now no more than 50 or 60 per cent of the farm population they had ten years ago, and as a result, their towns and small communities have not experienced the reviving influence of swelling business that has been felt by those of states in other sections of the country.

Commenting on the economic results of the huge back-to-the-farm movement, the Cleveland Plain Dealer expresses the hope that "a sustained increase in farm prices will make rural life more attractive and economically possible." The Plain Dealer believes further that:

It may revive some of the urban prosperity which has been emptying the farms before 1929. Which call will be the stronger? Possibly many will think twice before they again leave a farm which supplies three reasonably satisfactory meals a day.

Certainly this should be true of the south where farm life has none of the rigors and hardships that must be undergone by the rural dweller in colder sections of the country.

Farm life should be more attractive in this section than anywhere else in the Union, and it is one of the remarkable developments of a topsy-turvy period in American life that the farms of the south should not have been refilled as rapidly as those in other sections.

The Great White Way is getting out of the red.

DR. SOULE'S RETIREMENT.

The retirement of Dr. Andrew Soule as head of the State College of Agriculture at Athens brings to a close a long and useful period of service in the upbuilding and modernizing of agriculture in Georgia.

Under his direction the state college has been largely instrumental in bringing about the realization of Georgia farmers that their best interest lay in the abandonment of methods which had been in use in the state for more than a century.

Dr. Soule's work in broadcasting the doctrine of diversification, soil improvement and modern methods of cultivation will stand as a lasting memorial to earnest and able efforts to aid the farmer.

No man is due more credit than Dr. Soule for the revolution in agricultural methods which has taken place in the state during the past quarter of a century. The scientific basis on which the larger part of Georgia farming is now conducted is a development which was originated by Dr. Soule and has been brought to its present state as a result of unceasing labor to bring our farmers to a realization of the economic folly of sticking to antiquated and uneconomic methods.

Georgia owes much to Dr. Soule and his retirement will meet with widespread regret in agricultural and educational circles in the state. His intimate knowledge of agricultural conditions in Georgia and his recognized ability as an executive make him one of the south's outstanding experts on rural problems. Georgia will be the gainer if his future activities keep him as a resident of the state, so that the benefit of his expert counsel and wise advice will not be lost.

Note to stock market: There's plenty of room at the top.

STARS OF THE RING.

Ten years ago there was a ragged, hungry young German boy hanging about the seaports of his country, seeking chances to box. He got them, and within ten years he went back to Germany to be met by thousands of his cheering countrymen; back to a castle surrounded by lakes, a golf course of his own, and to luxuries undreamed of before.

About eight years ago an American boy in Omaha, of German-Jewish parents, began to learn to box.

On Thursday of this week the German boy, Maximilian Schmeling, will climb into a ring pitched in the Yankee Stadium at New York, to fight Maximilian Baer, of Omaha, in one of those American phenomena—the heavyweight fight.

It was the American heavyweight fight which took the timid German boy from his ship in New York harbor and within the space of two years sent him home tremendously wealthy.

Within the space of a few, searing, tearing, pulse-quicken minutes he had battered out independent wealth with his fists. He is 28 years old now and will take, from his fight Thursday night, more than $100,000 when all the profits of fighting and its accessory benefits are in.

The Baer boy from Omaha is making his first great bid. His profits will be somewhere in the neighborhood of $25,000—the pay of a great executive for one year—and he is but 24 years old.

The German boy was champion of the world for a while, losing it last summer to Jack Sharkey, an ex-sailor from the American navy, son of immigrant parents, who lives in luxury and wealth in Boston.

The winner of Thursday night's fight will be matched with Sharkey, provided he wins his summer test, in still another fight which will bring in more riches.

Some 60,000 or 70,000 people are expected to be about the ring Thursday night when the two boys climb into the ring to fight for the right to meet the champion.

They fight 15 rounds, if the fight goes the limit. Each round is three minutes long. There is a minute's rest between. At most they will be in the ring but an hour. But it is a terrific hour in which each lives a long, long time.

The American frontiers are gone, as indeed are the frontiers of the world. Sport alone offers the last frontiers where one may win riches and luxury and independence in one's youth with the strength of one's legs and arms and heart and the power of one's fists.

There may be something brutal about it, as some insist. The spectacles may offer nothing of cultural value to the world. But they remain a challenge to youth and it is likely we will always have them.

More autoists should give hitch-hikers their walking papers.

GUIDING THE RURAL YOUTH.

A clearing house of information on constructive community campaigns designed chiefly to keep up the morale of the unemployed is now being conducted by the Southern Woman's Educational Alliance, a research and service agency, with headquarters in Richmond, which is devoting itself to the guidance of rural young people.

The alliance, in stressing the steadily mounting problem presented by the thousands of young people who have been forced to go back to rural homes because there are no longer any jobs in the cities for them, points out that the mere fact of their return "to help mother and dad" takes little account either of—

What they left originally or of the farm conditions to which many of them are returning. It takes none at all of what is happening to them in their baffling sense of failure and of waste of energy, or of their share in the world-wide wonder as to where things will end. There are hosts of other unemployed, rural young people back in their homes, too; city-minded ones who have come out of school since the depression began, and are not needed at home; and that great number of others halted in their college education or other training, and now back at home faced—as so many city ones are—with a sense of arrested development.

With the proper guidance, these city-trained young people can be invaluable to the communities to which they return and which, in all probability, must be the homes of most of them for a long time to come.

The trek to the cities five years ago and that back to the farms during the past two years has emphasized the importance to the nation's welfare in the future of the proper development of its rural life.

The young people who have returned to the rural sections can either be a vital factor in the development of this rural life, as a result of their broadening and modernizing influence, or they can hold back its development because of "soured personalities" resulting from discontent and disappointment over their failure to "make good" in the cities.

The programs being prepared by the Woman's Alliance are based on an intensive study of the problems of these young people, of what local communities are doing to sustain their morale, and what aid to that end can be extended from outside sources.

It is a comprehensive, worthwhile endeavor and should receive co-operation both in the cities from which these young people have gone back to their former rural homes and in the communities in which they are now seeking to gain a new foothold.

Are We Getting Better or Worse?

BY PIERRE VAN PAASEN.
European Correspondent of The Constitution.

It is quite unavoidable it seems to me that the attentive observer of the contemporary world scene should at times grow faint of heart and that he should even experience a disquietude of spirit amounting to fear and anguish.

For in whatever direction he may turn his gaze he is bound to discern conditions or events or phenomena which disturb his mental peace and indeed often cause him to sigh in sheer bewilderment.

And the temptation must be strong at times, I should think, to banish the vision of a world in travail by seeking escape in a copious meal with its resulting feeling of comfortable drowsiness, visions of well-being and a merciful sense of security.

Comprehensible as this state of mind may be, it is inordinately in the attentive observer, that is to say, in the citizen who is conscious of his place in society and who intends to play his role, however humble, in the scheme of things. For he knows that he must act for himself, that he must do his own thinking and cannot rely on some benevolent power to take care of him. He knows that he must trace his own road, determine his own course of action through the violent and often ruthless interplay of clashing interests.

He is an attentive observer precisely for the reason that he does not shut his eyes and so invite the torpor of false security. He refuses to be lulled. He wants a clear head to face the reality, to see the world and its phenomena as they are, and he has nothing but despair for those in his environment who would lull him to sleep, or who would make him contemplate the scene around him through the rosy spectacles of the optimist, the green one of the envious or the black one of the pessimist. "Not through a glass darkly," but "face to face." That is his desire.

And yet with a mind unencumbered by prejudices, with a mind stripped of legendary ancestral memories in which hate and fear dominate with the unthinking clarity of vision the conscious man in our time can still not be exempt from experiencing serious apprehension at moments.

For what does he see? He sees suffering. He sees injustice. He hears lies. He meets false prophets. He is aware that efforts are made to angle his mental course in labyrinthine passages which have no issue. His urge for clarity is often frustrated by a deliberate falsification of the meaning of the forces at work in this world on the part of men whose interest it is to prevent him from seeing clearly.

We must go ahead. We must get out of this pool of stagnation lest we perish. The majority of the younger citizens in every country are fed up with dragging out their lives by inches. They want to live fully and richly, in full security of circumstances and not in the terror of a social chaos. They hold them today suspended and which tomorrow may throw them into some new vortex of destruction.

They are beginning to ask "Why?" things must be as they are, and not otherwise. They are taking nothing more for granted. They oppose a "why" to every edict.

If we look around us we see that the natural phenomena are not represented a disordered assemblage of facts which cannot be understood or foreseen, and we cannot believe that it is not so with social phenomena. Night follows day. Spring follows winter. Corn grows in the ear. There is a fixed law everywhere—in the growth of toolstools as well as in the majestic movements of the planets.

In human society, however complex it appears, we also and always discover that things operate according to fixed laws. If production goes up, not only the material well being of man increases but he also advances culturally. The perfection of technique modifies social life. Nothing mysterious about that. No blind forces of history there. It is the law of cause and effect steadily moving forward.

For the moment it may look as if there is a retrogression in human advance, a standstill or a slowing up, but the attentive observer may for the moment feel abashed and even disillusioned by what appears to him a halt in the orderly forward march of history. He will remain disillusioned until he realizes that the law of cause and effect is not suspended, that the world flies through space even if we do not see it move.

We may find that the course of humanity, the goal of which is perfection in human relations, what was said by Galilei when they had made him retract his theory of the earth moving around the sun and he, agitated at his own denial, whispered with a whisper that comes through the ages like a crash of thunder: "E pur si muove!" And yet it does move!

Now that profanity has been banned in the United States navy, the only way to pick up the latest in profanity will be at a bridge party.

Salesmen are beginning to be salesmen again. For the past three years they have merely been contact men.

Going Somewhere From Nowhere!

Amazed at the Action Of Christian Council Against Key's Stand

Editor Constitution: I have read with amazement the action of the Atlanta Christian Council in calling upon the grand jury for action against Mayor Key and city council in connection with the recent legalization of 3.2 per cent beer in the city of Atlanta. Sheriff Lowry's change of attitude, though regrettable, is more easily understood.

I believe, in view of the deluge of petitions which flooded Governor Talmadge's desk for a special session of the legislature to legalize beer in this state, that I voice the sentiments of an overwhelming majority of Atlantans and of Georgians generally when I express my whole-hearted endorsement of Mayor Key's courageous and open-minded action and my condemnation of the Atlanta Christian Council's un-Christian and narrow-minded attempt to force free-willed and intelligent people to conform to their own warped ideas of what constitutes "proper" modes of living.

Constitution Editorial Appreciated by Y.W.C.A. Business Women's Clubs

Editor Constitution: We read your editorial, "The Typists Celebrate," with much interest. It will be of interest to you to know that in our local Y. W. C. A. on March 28, 250 of our Atlanta business girls took note of the anniversary of the typewriter in their nation-wide banquet program.

It is of interest, too, that the first class to train typists was conducted by the New York Y. W. C. A. Recently the Y. W. C. A. Business Girls' League dramatized rather effectively the meeting of the board of directors in New York at which time the board voted to conduct this class, which was felt at that time, 60 years ago, that woman's entrance into the business world carried with it many moral dangers. Furthermore, it was felt that woman would not be physically strong enough to operate the new machine. Yet the Y. W. C. A. was willing to adjust itself to the new day and pioneer in the field of woman's progress.

There are six business women's clubs in the Atlanta Y. W. C. A. with a total membership of more than 1,000 Y. W. C. A. members of these clubs will greatly appreciate your editorial.

When Votes Were Sold In Georgia Legislature As a Matter of Course

Editor Constitution: The talk of the legislature being pretty rampant in dear old Georgia after each session of the general assembly.

Well, there is nothing new in this news, for—

So the world has done, Since roses grew, Violets were blue.

Or morning brought the sun, Secretary of State S. G. McLeoden's History of Public Domain, issued in 1924, contains dozens of instances like the following:

"Georgia, Burke County, 'Jan. 16th, 1796.

"Russell Jones, senator from the county of Franklin, being duly sworn, deposes that sometime in the late summer Thomas Raburn, Esq., a representative from said county in the late legislature, was at his house when James Cail and several others were present, and talking together on the sale of the western territory of this state, the said Cail told Raburn that he did not blame him for selling the land, but for selling his vote, so much lower than what than other members did; that he, Raburn, had sold his vote for $500 and that others had given a $1,000. Raburn replied that it showed that he was easily satisfied, and was not greedy.

"RUSSELL JONES, 'Sworn to in presence of a committee of the house of representatives, before me.

"THOMAS LEWIS, J. P." The above is one of many cases, as shown in Hon. S. G. McLeoden's valuable history of Georgia in Georgia a century and a half ago.

Harlem, Ga., June 1, 1933.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES.
On the Way.

It was so natural for Luke, who was a physician, to look at Jesus as a physician. He gives with ease the story of one day in the life of Jesus, from this standpoint, it is simply what happened to a physician on his way to the bedside of a sick child. A father came to the Master with an emergency call. His little girl was dying.

Jesus starts at once for her bedside. His mind and heart are possessed with this call to His sympathy and skill. "As He went," the story goes, "the multitude thronged Him."

How impersonal a great crowd is, until you pause to see it as composed of individual human experiences. Jesus was thinking of a father and a mother, whose hearts must be filled with the greatest anxiety for their little girl. The mind is only capable of a certain amount of conscious interest, and the more intense and concentrated that interest is, the less room there is for other interests. One pushes through the teeming thousands of people in a great city, unconscious of their thought and needs, because one is preoccupied with his own purpose and mission, which calls to his sense of responsibility. So Jesus must have been hurrying through this multitude, ignoring their woes and movements, because his thought was centered upon this one mission of mercy.

The Specialist.
We know now that mingling with that great crowd there was a woman who had been suffering for years with what seemed to be an incurable disease. She wanted and needed this very physician. But Jesus was on his way to answer a definite call to a definite need. What a pious this life. One cannot move toward the accomplishment of any purpose without a score of other worthy purposes challenging his sympathy and help. There is so much to be done and so many who are willing and competent to serve. In modern life we have attempted to meet this situation by a division of labor. By apportioning life's tasks we can save time and energy and gain in efficiency. So we give men special training for special work. Ours is the day of the specialist and the expert.

But there is a danger here, one is apt to have a sense of responsibility and consciousness of obligation narrow to include only his specialty. He is in danger of thinking of himself and his duties within the limits of his professional service. This is to narrow and impoverish life itself by limiting its interests and sympathies. To identify one's life with the practice of law or of medicine, merchandising or engineering inevitably confines one's thought of and interest in men to the viewpoint of his profession. Men are apt to become "patients" or "clients" or "customers." Thus the expression of a man's life is limited. We should understand that the opportunity and responsibility of being a physician, one's profession or vocation, are only one mode for the expression of his life. Much that is richest and best in personality can never find a professional expression.

So far from discounting one's responsibility with his special task, I would agree that it is his first responsibility. But I am thinking of that large realm of life which is "on the way" to the factory, the office or the patient. It is the life of contacts with one's community which is not professional. It is that phase of life in which you make casual connections with strangers, neighbors, citizens and friends. It is the "by the way" associations. This phase of life is often described by the phrase "off duty." Now I raise the question, is it "off duty"? Off special duty, it is readily granted. But the insistence here is that the special duties and obligations included in one's profit-making enterprise does not begin to include all the obligations of life.

The modern world has opened up a great realm of social service which must be provided for outside of official and technical life

Miss Davis and Mr. Trosdal Miss Fluker Weds Mr. Chopin Wed at Summer Ceremony At Quiet Church Ceremony

An arched window, outlined with maiden hair fern and flanked by Easter lilies, formed the background for the wedding tableau when Miss Maria Nelson Davis became the bride of Einar Storm Trosdal, of Savannah, Ga., last evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. E. C. Davis, on Peachtree Battle avenue. Dr. Ellis Fuller, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends.

A garland of the feathery fern studded with the Easter lilies encircled the arched window at the end of the spacious living room, where the vows were taken. A seven-branched candelabra was placed in the center of the window arch and at either side were floor baskets of Easter lilies, before an effective background of greenery, palms, ferns and other foliage plants were banked in the corners of the room, affording a backdrop for the floral decorations.

Proceeding and during the ceremony the Griffith String ensemble rendered a musical program, including the following selections: Brahms' waltz, "Romance"; "When a Maid Comes Knocking at Your Heart," by Fauré; "I Love You Truly," by Carrie Jacobs Bond; "Love Chat," by Odell; "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice," by Saint-Saëns; "Barcarolle," from the "Tales of Hoffman," by Chopin; "Ave Maria," by Gounod; "Prière," by Haffelmann; "Angelus," by Reine; wedding march from Wagner's "Lohengrin"; "At Dawning," by Cadman. A varied program of appropriate numbers was played during the reception.

Miss Catherine Davis, sister of the bride and her only attendant, wore an exquisite model of buttercup yellow chiffon posed over a yellow satin slip. The high neckline in the front was cut to a low décolletage in the back, outlined by a circular ruffle and finished with soft flowers of the same material. The gown was closely fitted to her figure and flared to form a graceful skirt. She carried a bouquet of yellow calla lilies tied with chartreuse green ribbon.

Richard Heard, of Savannah, acted as Mr. Trosdal's best man and Dr. Shelley C. Davis gave his sister in marriage.

Beautiful Bride

Silvery satin fashioned the lustrous gown worn by the lovely bride, enhancing her bristled coloring. Panels of the satin extended from the shoulders to the waistline and the sleeves were puffed to the elbows, with lace extending from the elbow to the wrist, where it formed a point over the hand. The cord neckline was a becoming feature and the skirt, molded to her slender figure, fell to the floor. The veil of filmy illusion tulle fell in soft folds from a cape of beautiful old rose point lace, an heirloom in the family of the bridegroom. The lace cap was fitted to her head and confined to her dark hair at either side with a cluster of orange blossoms, the veil falling over the long oval train of the satin. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley tied with broad satin ribbon.

Following the ceremony Mrs. Edward Campbell Davis, mother of the bride, entertained at a reception. Mrs. Davis received the guests wearing a gown of powder blue chiffon, posed over a slip of blue crepe and worn with a shoulder spray of sweetheart roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Einar Storm Trosdal, mother of the bridegroom, who received with the hostess, was gowned in white lace made on princess lines with short full caplets falling gracefully from the shoulders. She wore a bouquet of gardenias.

Out-of-Town Guests

Miss Pritchard Gayle and Miss Betty Wilson kept the bride's book and serving punch were Misses Ruth Norris, Sally Spalding and Charlotte Collier. The bride's table was overlaid with a cover of princess lace and centered with the tiered bride's cake, which was effectively enshrouded with valley lilies and orange blossoms, and topped with a basket of valley lilies.

Among out-of-town guests present for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. William Way, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Boyd, Walter Boyd, Hugh Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Sullivan, Miss Mary Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Reidar A. Trosdal, all of Savannah; Frank Hayward, of Lake City, Fla.; Mrs. T. M. Ticknor, of Albany, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Oliver, of Macon; Warren Oliver, of Macon; Miss Edwina Davis, of Albany, N. Y.; S. M. Davis, of Rome, N. Y.; and Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Clark III, of Rockmart, Ga.

Mr. Trosdal and his bride left for a wedding trip, Mrs. Trosdal choosing for traveling an ensemble of brown flat crepe with collar and cuffs of sheerest white organdy, giving a smart note. ## Miss Stovall Receives White House Call.

Two days before the Oglethorpe University commencement, at which time the degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Governor Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, the telephone rang at the university and Miss Margaret Stovall, capable young secretary to the president, was told that Washington, D. C., was calling her over long distance. Miss Stovall held the phone for a minute, and imagine her surprise when suddenly a voice said "The White House, Washington." Within another moment a calm, gentlemanly voice said: "Miss Stovall, this is Joseph Canavan, Governor Lehman's secretary." "And at that," said Miss Stovall, "I was almost as thrilled as if the call had come from President Roosevelt himself." Mr. Canavan was calling to get some last-minute information about plans for the commencement exercises.

The ceremony was solemnized Saturday morning in the study of the Peachtree Christian church.

The Rev. Robert W. Burns, pastor of the church, read the marriage service in the presence of the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom.

The lovely young bride chose for the ceremony a Schiaparelli model of aquamarine triple sheer with smart touches of white French pique. Her becoming small hat and gloves were also of white pique, an effective contrast formed by black accessories. A shoulder spray of gar-denias and valley lilies completed the charming ensemble.

Mrs. Baughman is the only daughter of her parents, and Robert E. Hastings Jr. is her brother. Her mother was before her marriage Miss Pearl Bush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dudley Bush, of Anniston, Ala., who trace their ancestry to include the Dudley, Beall, Jones and King families, pioneer settlers of Georgia and Alabama.

over in Washington to discuss some very important matters with President Roosevelt, and, together with Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and several other notables, they were having a conference in the oval room of the White House. In order that the call might go through perfectly and that I might be able to hear you better, the president, the governor and Mr. Woodin had to stop their conference long enough for us to finish the conversation. So you see," he said laughingly, "you stopped the wheels of the government of the United States for several minutes."

Miss Hastings Weds James C. Baughman

She is a graduate of Agnes Scott College, where she won the distinction of being elected Phi Beta Kappa.

Children of Confederacy Meet June 15-16 in Social Circle, Ga.

The twenty-first annual convention of the Children of the Confederacy will be held in Social Circle, June 15 and 16, with the Emma Sanson chapter as hostess. Plans are being made for this Georgia biennial year convention to be the most interesting in the history of the organization.

The convention will open with a directors' meeting on Thursday, June 15, at 4 o'clock at the Methodist church. Among the distinguished speakers will be Mrs. R. B. Broyles, of Birmingham, Ala., third vice president; Mrs. L. Bashinski, of Dublin, president of Georgia division; U. D. C.; Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, of Eatonton, state director of C. of C.; and Mrs. E. C. Dohs, of Atlanta, who was president of the Julia Jackson chapter, C. of C., in 1912 when the first state conference was held in Atlanta.

Biennial features of the program will be the presentation of "Georgia's Children," a playlet written by the Emma Sanson chapter, C. of C., a parade of Belles and Beauties of the Past will be held at the close of the evening session when the delegates dressed in costumes of yesterday will hold a gala festival.

The recitation and declamation contest will be held on Thursday evening. Friday's program will consist of reports of officers, chairmen and chapter presidents and the state director's annual message. Mrs. Dennis' address to the convention will have as its theme "Georgia's Part in the War Between the States."

Miss Hadley was honored by her election as a member of the Phi Beta Kappa national scholastic honorary fraternity. She won a scholarship in chemistry and will continue her work in the fall at Emory University. The commencement activities began Saturday and at the conclusion Tuesday the Atlantans will return to this city to spend a part of the summer.

Love Story Told In Nuptial Music.

Romantic significance was attached to the musical program given at the wedding of Miss Marian Nelson Davis and Einar Storm Trosdal, of Savannah, which took place last evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. E. C. Davis, on Peachtree Battle avenue. Mrs. Mary Griffith Dohs, skilled harpist, who was in charge of the affair, expressed the story of the romance of the young couple in music by her clever selection of numbers played preceding the ceremony. Mrs. Dohs was assisted by Lucien Thomson, harpist; Miss Ruth Dahney Smith, violinist; and Walter Bedard Jr., mandolinist.

College Belles Plan Interesting Trips.

Interesting trips and visits are centering the interest of the group of youthful Atlanta belles who have been away at school during the past winter. Among the most exciting plans are those of Miss Betty McDuffie, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip McDuffie, who was a member of the freshman class at Sophie Newcomb College and a sorority at the Phi Beta Kappa. At the close of school Friday, Miss McDuffie went to Biloxi, Miss., where she is spending the week-end on a house party given by New Orleans friends. She will spend to days with Miss Mildred Wood at her home in Houston, Texas, before returning to Atlanta in mid-June, and the latter part of the month Miss McDuffie will sail with a party of friends for a two-month European trip.

Attractive Miss Dorothy Brumby, who is a student at Hollins College, Virginia, will leave at the close of school for Gastonia, N. C., to visit her schoolmate, Miss Anna Boyce Rankin, for a week before accompanying Miss Rankin to Lexington, Va., where these belles will attend the final dance series of Virginia Military Academy. Miss Brumby will return to Atlanta June 14 to spend a part of her summer vacation. Misses Mary Traylor Thiesen, Mary Spalding Dean and Suzanne Knox, who have been students at Gunston Hall, Washington, D. C., have been enjoying visits before returning to Atlanta. The trio have been visiting Miss Perkins Morton at her home in Lynchburg, Va., and Miss Thiesen, in addition, plans visits to Misses Sarah Warner Ferguson in Lynchburg and Hilton Roller at Fort Defiance, Va. Misses Thiesen and Knox will return home Wednesday, and Miss Dean returned Friday.

Trio of Sisters Make Enviably Record.

It is seldom that a trio of sisters makes the enviable record made by Misses Mary, Carolyn and Dorothy Malone, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Malone, who have been literally showered with honors by their school and by their contemporaries. Miss Mary Malone graduated from North Avenue Presbyterian school last week, Miss Carolyn Malone will be a member of next year's junior class at the same school, and Miss Dorothy Malone, who seems destined to follow the splendid example of her sisters, will enter the eighth grade in the fall.

Miss Mary Malone, who has served as president of the student body during her senior year at school, was awarded the highest honor available to a senior when she was crowned Naptoria at the class day exercises held Monday. This coveted honor is kept a secret until class day, when it is awarded to the most representative girl in the senior class. This eldest sister was awarded the D. A. R. medal and was a member of the tennis and swimming teams for several years during her high school career. In her junior year she was president of the Cecilians, school drama club, and was awarded the Gladys Neal cup given to the most outstanding student below the senior class. Social activities also find a prominent place on the calendar of this attractive young belle, who was named Miss Health several years at N. A. P. S. because of her vital, alive appearance.

Although she has had only two years in high school, Miss Carolyn Malone has already received her share of honors. She served as president of her class during the past year and tied for the Gladys Neal cup won by her sister last year. She has been elected president of the Cecilian Dramatic Club for next year, in addition to serving as a member of the tennis and swimming teams. Miss Carolyn Malone was awarded the title of Miss Health this year, which was won by her elder sister the past two years. At Nakanawa camp at Mayland, Tenn., both of these sisters have achieved high distinction during summers spent there. Miss Carolyn Malone being named "Lady of the Cup" last summer.

The third of the trio is very popular with her associates and takes an active part in athletics, having won the seventh-grade tennis tournament this year and serving as a member of the junior high school tennis team. When Mrs. Jane Mattingly, who directs the musical studies of these talented sisters, presented the trio in a recital recently, Miss Dorothy Malone's selections, though not so difficult as those of her sisters, being executed with the same finesse and she displayed remarkable poise. All three, received with them ribbons and Miss Mary Malone did not miss a day throughout her high school years.

Georgia Federation President Gives Splendid Annual Report at Council

Mrs. J. W. Holston of Comer, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, made her annual report on April 27 at the session of the annual convention held in Savannah during the last week in April. As the chairman of finance, Mrs. Holston stated that the federation had not suffered no financial loss in the past year, and that its obligations promptly, and that the pledge to general federation fund for 1933 had been repaid and will be completed in August. She also stated that the federation was indebted to the invaluable service of the Ella F. White Endowment Fund, the interest enabling the federation to meet emergency needs and to expand its program. The federation's program, Her report was as follows:

Two Foundations. "The work of our two educational foundations, Tallulah Falls Industrial School and Student Aid Foundation, has gone forward in splendid manner. The latter is particularly noteworthy, because our far-seeing chairman and board of trustees have advocated that economy at the expense of education is false economy. The three-point plan for Tallulah has been used this year by the district presidents with good results. An added honor beams from our district for the year 1932-33. The award was placed on the southern accredited list of schools for 1932-33, at the meeting of the southern association in New Orleans. It has been in the accredited list of state schools for the past five years."

The grand total of $86,358.75 of loans made by the Student Aid Foundation since the year 1906 in assistance to needy girls is a record of the devotion and the excellent staff who direct its functioning. Our chairman of gift scholarships has supplied many worthy girls and one boy to the sum of $7,000 in various scholarships.

"Our department and divisional chairmen have presented excellent outlines of work in their respective sublines of work. I am sure that you to whom we look for guidance and direction in club activity. Perhaps the department of public welfare has been the most overtaxed in meeting situations and requests for help. I am following up requests of the general federation chairman, Miss Julia Jaffray, for efforts during the last fall were made to supply help to the general act in urging state agencies to purchase supplies in advance of institutions.

"I would call attention to certain division of work, taken from the outline of general federation, and used for the first time in ours: Mother's Day, Christmas, Valentine's Day, literary, recreation and night use of leisure. Our general federation president, Mrs. Grace Morrison Pool, has said: 'I do not care how much the department overlaps, they are all needed to make life better and richer—really all the work could be done through any one, but each gains added effectiveness from the work of all.' Just as do, we try to specialize in one line, but we are all in it in 'Diversity.' Every phase of club activity touches our lives directly or indirectly through our interests in the home, the community, the state and the nation, and we are all equal in it. For we are aware of the utter impossibility of isolation in world affairs and policies.

Today's Preparation. "Today's preparation is the basis for tomorrow's progress. In looking ahead for the advancement of our organization it appears that extension will be chosen as a major objective for another year. Club membership

Major Objectives. "The three major objectives of this year were: Live at some program, juniors, and Georgia bicentennial. Each has brought forth splendid efforts and results. Our chairman of agricultural co-operation has been most faithful, she has given us a splendid practical outline and plans of application. We note with pride that our state has made a period of time when it was not available for concert programs is not only a privilege but an investment that brings returns beyond computation. In choosing our programs for another year let us study their needs of our clubs and communities, seek to present well-balanced programs, remembering that the community is a life call for a balance of the beautiful, the cultural-art literature and music."

Somehow unique among musical programs for the season, will be the concert given Sunday afternoon at the Fifteenth Theater for the benefit of the Atlanta-Fiftieth Georgia Association of the Deaf. The benefit concert given by the Atlanta-Fiftieth Georgia Association of the Deaf is conducted exclusively by blind musicians.

The concert, somewhat unique, was most remarkable in demonstrating unusual gift of memory and concentration. The program was a series of songs whose artistic achievement rival that of musicians who are aided by perfect accompaniment. The program was presented by the pianist and accompanist must be memorized; in fact, Mr. Hagenbooth was the only pianist accompanying the singers without perfect accord and sympathy, after having had the music read to him not Called back by an appreciative audience, following the concerto for two piano by Nenselt, Mr. Donohoe, with Miss Waldrip, sang the song, "If I Were a Bird," arranged for two pianos by the same composer, but not frequently heard as a two-part song. Miss Higgenbotham, with a lyric voice of delightful quality, sang "May Morning," by Denza; and Miss Waldrip sang "The Song of the Lark," by the Healey-Wallace. "Nymphs and Fauns." Among the songs of Mr. Mullinnes were "The Sun-Song," "The Rose," "The Sacred Number," "The Lord is My Light."

Mr. Mullines, whose personal voice is familiar to the audiences, as a teacher vocal art and is also Clubs, under whose auspices the concert was given, considers the opportunity and occasion for serving others, through the sponsorship of an enjoyable and profitable social gathering, a happy privilege, the president stated. Arrangements for the concert were under the direction of the Fine Arts department of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs.

Summer Sweethearts

BY RAEBURN VAN BUREN

Teddy Thomas Goesa-Fortune-Hunting!

SUNDAY, JUNE 4, 1933

Trade Mark Registration Applied for

2 FINDS the one he thinks he has been looking for. But she is no heiress, no spoiled darling of the world of Wall Street, the Riviera and Newport, for if she were what would she be doing behind the wrong side of the hotel cigar counter.

Nevertheless, the elegantly clad Teddy is smitten by her charm, her grace and that certain very special look in her Mediterranean blue eyes. Instead of romping with the daughters of bankers and brokers, with sylphs who were born with emerald-studded spoons in their mouths, our hero finds himself spending the best part of his day at Marmaduke Springs with Jeanne, the lovely, but humble, vendor of cigars. And now we will let you in on a secret.

1 TEDDY THOMAS is looking over the ladies at the very ritzy summer resort, Marmaduke Springs. It is his ambition and earnest wish to appear blase before the galaxy of beauties who frolic on the beaches, golf-courses, bridle-paths and in the trout-streams.

Teddy at present is the only eligible man around and if he's looking for a dream girl (and who isn't?) he ought to be happy among this choice assortment of blondes, brunettes and redheads. But poor Teddy possesses what used to be termed a poetic soul and none of these rich and lovely young things quite comes up to his extravagant expectations. However, all is not lost, for Teddy is spending two whole weeks at the fashionable social playground and sure enough he—

3 TEDDY himself is no child of the idle rich. We see him pursuing his real profession—selling women's shoes. For a whole year Teddy saved up his pennies and went without lunches, sustained by the dream of spending two splendid weeks among the wealthy at doggy Marmaduke Springs.

He didn't intend to pose there as a millionaire. Not exactly. If the rich younger set took him for a young financier or sportsman he wouldn't contradict them. And, he had thought, if some beautiful and wealthy Social Registerite just happened to fall in love with him—well—

Diana's Diary

JUST a few lines with this order, diary. Its late and the bones of a busy waitress gets weary after another week of dealin' off of the arm in the B'way eat-it-and-beat-it.

To appear attractive, I must get 1's beauty sleep, and this I has to look her hideous on the morrow, for then she goeth fourth with Michael, the traffic-cop of her dreams, to drive and dine and dance.

Oh, diary, I could hugg you, He cares! I'm sure he does. Thill be the fif Sundy in a row. Even a dumm book made out of flat paper with funny lines all rooled off is got brains enough to reconize reason when its put in it by the hand of the party of the first part. Thats little Di, diary.

I tell you, that man is moved in. Aready he cridizes evrything I do and evrything I ware like a reglar husband. Aliso, he demands to know with who do I spend my rest of the evenings when hes stop-going on his xing and do any cake-munchers hang around my house. And am I miss-tearous! Yes-and-no and exacy who wants to know is my addatude. When a girls free and independant—

That burns him up. That I'm free and independant. He hasnt let go the words what would make me hooked like a codfish, but it ribs him that I'm free and independant. Say, if he upped with one quetion I got in mind I'd sarendar all the freedom and independance what Washington and Garibaldy and Peggy Hopkins ever won. But as long as he hezardates I'll flaxnt my libbetty in his pan and his madjesty can sizzle.

I cant hold it agensit a guy becuz he is cawshus. Michael hasnt yet met my family and our soshul contax have been confined to the beanyery and the dates we had, on all of which latter he met me on the outside. Thats OK for a playgirl but a man wants to get better infamation befor he goes into anything as cereous as madrimoney. I havent pressed the madder. I hinted that he was welcome in my humbel home. I sagedated that mom cooks a beef stew that has few eegels. He let it lay so I havent picked it up since.

I aint crowding him into no corner, of printing presses, turning out the hundreds of thousands of sheets that you may read the big things that come in over the cables and the wires and the inconsequential stuff that I and scores of other "by-line" trained seals turn out—

Writing the diary of an imaginary waitress while on all sides of me spin the comedies and tragedies of the complex lives of millions—

Projecting myself into the spirit of a working girl, ten minutes after I have left a cocktail party on the forty-second story of the Waldorf-Astoria, where I mingled with the assembled stars of the stage, the screen, the air, the big dough and the front page—

In the indescribably regal apartment of N. B. Spingold, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, and his wife, the former Mme. Frances, the genius who and her junkets to Paris and Monte Carlo and Biarritz—

Mingling with millions, rubbing elbows with the famous—

Glancing out of the window—from the forty-second story—at fabulous, preposterous New York—

Trying to visualize in that glance, intaglioed with the peaks and towers and turrets and weird arabesques that men have lifted up toward the sky off this tight island with a heart of granite pierced by a billion shafts of steel—what unwritten dramas, what undreamed-of romances, what colossal epics of men and women must be transpiring behind all those walls, within all those plastered structures, some of them far higher than my forty-second-story point of view—

What schemes are being propagated, what hopes are being dissipated, what love and passion and cruelty and larceny and treachery and loyalty and insanity, what frustration and triumph, what creation of life and passing from life, what ecstasy and despair, what conspiracy and charity, what tipsy hilarity and sober reality must be crowded into that moment within the walls of that unsolvable jigsaw puzzle of mid-Manhattan—

And, a few minutes later, here I am, writing the misspelled griefs and hopes of a waitress, whose whole being is concentrated in a grumpy traffic-cop! Well, we can't all be Angelos and paint angels.

Sometimes some of us must be portrayers of the ants and worms—the great hordes of beings that are blurred into massed waves where there are no individual identities when one gazes from the forty-second story—

We cannot all, always, gaze from the forty-second story—

Life's business is mainly on the ground floor, even in New York!

Idiosyncrazies—

S. S. Van Dine (right name Wright—Willard Huntington Wright) occupation, writer, who knocks off those goosefleshy detective mystery books, is an authority on Scotch terriers and a maniac on tropical fish (which latter is the outstanding New York fad of 1933!) besides being a fluent talker of Yiddish, an acquired distinction, since he could qualify a hundred per cent in a Nazi cross-examination and none of his best-sellers were burned to smoke up the Hitler holiday.

The beer-scalper is a timely innovation. Since the joyous advent of 3-dimal-2, the little storekeepers can't get all they want when they want it; brewers deliver by routes, and, what with modern traffic-troubles, a lot of stops and drops is a slow and costly process. So middlemen have moved themselves in, as is the New York system. They contract for truck-loads on speculation and tie up most of the output and assess the scattered distributors who aren't big enough to take whole cargoes. It isn't exactly a racket—but it looks like a pretty good start of one—just as soon as the scalpers begin huffing for trade and arrogating unto themselves "territory." Nickel beer is an iridescent and evanescent dream, dying of insomnia... In this wide-awake town, where there is a demand, there is a rake-off.

The nudists are issuing a magazine, subtly called "The Nudist." It news-stands at a quarter an eyeful and its masthead slogan is "Living the Good Life Wherein Honesty is Most Beautiful." It is the official organ of the International Nudist Conference, which for $5 a year offers one (and all) co-operative membership, "insuring introduction to nudist groups in accordance with their respective rules and securing entrance to nudist camps throughout the country." The nudists are dry, nonpolitical and without religious predilections.

THE long search by Sir Gerard Maxwell-Willshire, London's effervescent playboy, for the bluebird of contentment seems to have ended happily at last.

For years Sir Jerry, as his intimates call him, appalled and amused two continents with his romantic escapades. Yet there was something almost tragic in his futile and oftentimes spectacular efforts to find complete bliss.

Among the outstanding episodes in his dizzy career was his marriage to a lovely stage beauty. Then he infuriated London when he drove a girl to the woods, tied her to a tree and painted her with shoe-blackening. That ended in a prison sentence. Finally he married Vera Gainford, New York modiste.

His friends—and the public, generally—waited for that romance to end unhappily. But they waited in vain. Recently—after ten years—word came from London that Sir Jerry and his second wife had remarried in order to obviate possible legal disputes. It was a gallant gesture on his part—and on hers.

Unusual as this procedure might seem, the significant thing about it was that Jerry seemed to have captured and held on to romance. Also, it would seem that he has changed his ways and turned to more sober pursuits.

Lovely Lillian Birtles, London and New York Stage Star, Who Was Sir Gerard's First Wife, She Did Not Contest His Divorce.

Intimate Photo-Study of Sir Gerard Maxwell-Willshire, Once Famous on Two Continents as a Playboy. But the Sir Jerry of Today Is an Older and Wiser Man.

The fact is, the wild escapades charged to Jerry caused him to be disinherited by his family about a decade and a half ago. After that he supported himself by jobs in the choruses of West End productions. An engagement took the company to Australia, where Jerry met and married Lillian Birtles, famous stage beauty, once known as the highest paid chorus girl in the world. They returned to England.

The marriage, however, didn't last long, for one day Jerry left London. His wife began to hear reports about him from Ceylon. These told of hilarious week-end parties. On one occasion Jerry and his companions "kidnaped" a locomotive and drove it themselves.

Upon his return to London he sued the first Lady Maxwell-Willshire for divorce. She did not contest the suit. Having obtained his divorce, he came to America, where he proceeded to add a certain flavor to his name by becoming a bridge-path escort to wealthy young ladies. However, he fell in love, not with a Park Avenue debutante, but with Miss Gainford, an English girl, who owned a New York dress shop.

They were married quietly and went to London. There Sir Jerry lapsed into his old ways. The climax of his hilarious escapades was reached when he was arrested on complaint of Jean Olds, a hairdresser.

She said that she had accepted Sir Jerry's flattering invitation to motor and dine with him. They stopped on a lonely road and Sir Jerry ordered the girl to accompany him into the woods. There he tied her to a tree and proceeded to cover her with a coating of shoe-blackening!

Jerry was sentenced to six months in jail. What surprised Mayfair, however, was that his pretty wife stuck by him through his trial.

Since then the blueblooded baronet has been a quiet, chastened figure. Recently, it seems, Sir Jerry and his wife became apprehensive about the status of their marriage.

They feared the second ceremony might not stand in London. That is why the remarriage took place. With it, Sir Jerry seems to have served notice on the world that he has no intention of letting romance slip away again.

Death to the Americans!

By Thomas M. Johnson

"THE first American war veteran in Paris to receive the Military Order of the Purple Heart was Peter de Pasqua, assistant manager of the third-class department of the United States Lines office there. The decoration was given to Mr. de Pasqua by virtue of the meritorious service citation awarded him in 1918 by General Pershing."

Underneath this bare clipping from the house organ published by the United States Lines lies hidden the true story of the first American decoration that has been awarded to an operative of the A. E. F.'s secret service, told for the first time, with his full name and those of the other participants, and all the details of the gallant exploit of counter-espionage that won him the honor.

It took place in the thrilling, critical summer of 1918, in the old French city of Beaune, important center on the American Services of Supply. There, in the back room of the small drinking place, sat three men.

"Death to the Americans! I hate them all!"

A swarthy fist crashed down upon the table top, the candle flame leaped, casting an eerie, flickering light upon the speaker's face. A dark face, with high cheekbones and cruel lips parted to show discolored teeth—an ugly vision of malignant hatred, inflamed by wine.

"In the name of the saints, Diaz," said one of his drinking companions, anxiously, "be careful what you shout so loudly, with all these Americans about."

Some doughboys, lining the copper-topped bar, must have understood a little Spanish. They started angrily toward the party of three.

With a howl of rage, Diaz arose. In his hand, a knife glittered. One American seized a wine bottle, another a heavy broom. The wine shop was in turmoil.

At that instant, a rather slight young man in civilian clothes threw himself at Diaz, pouring forth a torrent of Spanish. Amazed, Diaz stood weaving in his tracks, then slowly put up the knife and sat down again with his white-faced companions. The man who had so miraculously cooled his rage, turned to the surprised doughboys.

"You're a helluva lot of wiseguys!" he remarked. "Getting into trouble in the only place for blocks where we can get a drink! D'you wanta bring in the M. P.'s?"

At that psychological moment, Yvette, the barmaid, invited "tous les braves soldats Americains" to drink on the house. That was so unusual that the versatile peacemaker was unnoticed as he joined Diaz and his two friends.

"COME, drink with us," Diaz cried. "Drink the good rich Beaune wine, and forget troubles, even"—this time he lowered his voice—"even the accursed Yankees."

So, around the candle, warmed by red Beaune wine, they talked, always in Spanish.

Two of the three were Spaniards, brought to France by the Americans, to help complete the great building projects that made up the S. O. S., including a large base hospital at Beaune. The third was a Frenchman, invalided out of the army, and of Socialist tendencies.

Their new friend had not only lived in Spain, but he knew so many languages that the American Red Cross had hired him as interpreter for the thousands of laborers of all nations imported to Beaune. His name was Pietro, he liked wine, cards, and dice, yet he drank and gambled without losing his head. So it appeared.

Diaz was noisy and quarrelsome, but the newcomer seemed to like him.

"I could easily see, amigo," he said, "that you were a Spanish aristocrat. Naturally, these doughboys irritate you. But, is there no other reason?"

Diaz's bloodshot eyes searched Pietro's youthful face. He poured himself another drink, then explained, with venomous voice:

"I was born in Cuba, of an influential family. But when the Americans conquered, in 1898, they made us go back to Spain. I was drafted into the army, and when I would not obey low-class sergeants, the colonel ordered me flogged."

"That night I slipped into his quarters and thrust my knife into his heart. Then I fled here to France, to work for these Americans whom I hate—but only to get revenge."

They all got on so well together that they agreed to meet again. Pietro watched the three figures wobbling grotesquely over the cobblestones of Beaune, until they disappeared around a corner. Then he went quickly in the other direction, turned into a slot of an alley, ran up a flight of arched-over stairs, and rapped softly three times. The door opened, and a low voice spoke:

"Well, Sergeant, you're late. Anything doing?"

"Yessir, there's something doing," replied Pietro. "I've just spent hours drinking with our men."

"No!" exclaimed his questioner. A delighted gesture with his flashlight revealed the uniform and shoulder bars of a captain in the American army. Then, eagerly: "Are they up to something?"

"THEY may be," Pietro replied. "Diaz is a bad actor, but when he drinks, he talks."

Then he told in detail what had happened.

"That's fine!" the captain said. "But watch yourself. I don't want to lose my best I. P. If you get away with this, I'll recommend you for the Distinguished Service Medal."

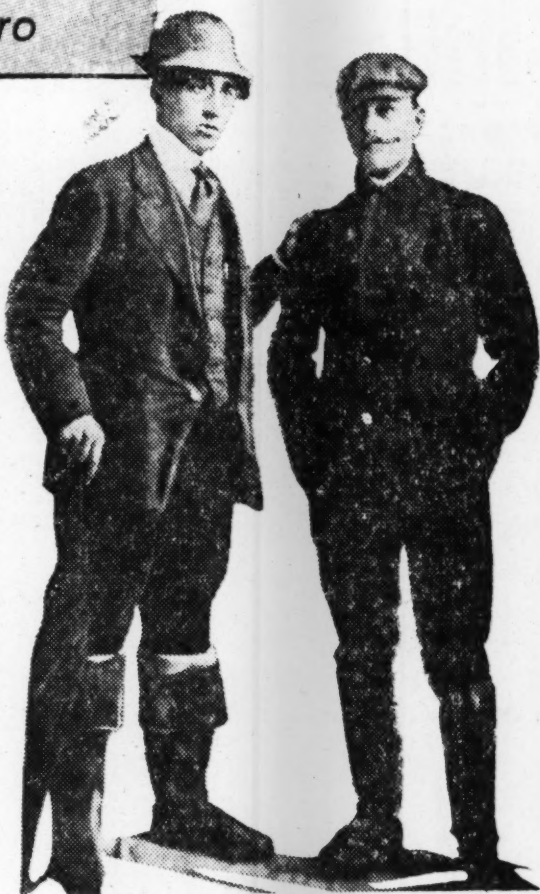

Now this is the true story of how Sergeant Pietro did get away with the case, and was recommended for the Distinguished Service Medal, although he never got that decoration.

Not until he recently received the newly-re-established decoration of the Purple Heart could it be told that "Sergeant Pietro" was actually Peter de Pasqua, now of the United States Lines, then, in 1918, of a remarkable body of men termed officially the Corps of Intelligence Police of the American Expeditionary Forces, France, and known secretly simply as "The I. P."

Known secretly, and to but few, for the I. P. were a mighty arm of the A. E. F.'s secret service, which was, as it was supposed to be, secret. Even today, many veterans haven't heard of it. Yet the I. P. were a romantic and useful body of men.

They covered France and England, from front to ports, in varied disguises. Their task was to hunt for German spies, informers, and disloyal, among the civilian population of England, France, Belgium, and later, inside the German borders.

He jabbed the knife into his wrist. . . . The blood trickled upon the table-top. . . . "An oath of compadres, an oath in blood! Death to the Americans!"

Above, Peter de Pasqua (left) photographed in 1918, when he masqueraded as Pietro and exposed a German spy plot. . . . In the photograph at the right this gallant winner of the Military Order of the Purple Heart is shown as he looks today.

THAT is counter-espionage, or "spy-chasing." It caused many adventures, many narrow escapes, among which this one of Peter de Pasqua's was outstanding.

Without arousing the least suspicion, he must work his way into the confidence of three men with a fanatic hatred of the American Army in which he was a sergeant. And they were not bluffing, Diaz especially, in talking of what they would do to these hated Americans.

Kill, burn, destroy, they cried. Diaz was the leader. But, exactly what were their plans?

It took "Pietro" many nights over cards and dice and red Beaune wine to find out. He had to invent grievances against the Americans, and curse them foully. Then came a night when no Americans were in the cafe, only the three plotters and Pietro. Diaz was in a black mood, restless, brooding. Finally, he said in a low voice:

"Pietro, you're a good fellow. Can you get hold of an American mail censor's stamp?" "For you, compadre, I would do anything," Pietro replied. "But, why?"

"I'll tell you," the Spaniard said, at last. "I am here as agent of the chief of the German Secret Service in northern Spain. I have sent him two reports already, but I don't know whether he has received them. Now, if I write a letter, and you stamp the envelope with the American stamp, 'Passed as Censored,' it will go right through."

"Consider it done, compadre!" cried Pietro. "Write your letter."

THAT night Pietro and his captain read an impassioned offer to steal and send to the German chief a map of Beaune and plans of all the American works going on there, including the new base hospitals, which would be bombed, if not by German airplanes, then by Diaz and his comrades. Would the German chief send instructions? And secret ink?

"We'll send this German's name and address to Major Moreno at G. H. Q.," said the captain, carefully re-sealing the letter. "Now, you go ahead and join in with their plots and see what you can find out."

So, in another secret session around the Beaune bottle, Pietro confided that he could supply a skeleton key, to fit the door admitting to the hospital plans. That very night, he promised, he would draw away the American sentry, while Diaz stole the plans. The Spaniard enthusiastically agreed.

That very night he did the trick. But Pietro's plan almost went awry and the Spaniard nearly lost his life. A sentry detected Diaz, and Pietro had to intercede swiftly, explaining that "we're saving that guy up."

Patience was rewarded. His success in stealing the plans whetted Diaz's appetite. Next night he craved more action.

"If our good friend Pietro will once more borrow that censor's stamp," he said, "we'll send the plans to the German chief."

PIETRO promised. In great good humor,

Diaz called for wine. Then, when the bottle was before him, he whipped out his knife.

"Let us take an oath!" he cried. He jabbed the knife into his wrist. The blood trickled upon the table-top. "An oath of compadres, an oath in blood! Death to the Americans!"

He snatched Pietro's fountain pen, and with a gruesome mixture of red blood and black ink, scrawled it upon a sheet of paper: "Death to the Americans!" Beneath he signed his name. Then he forced each of the others to dip the pen into the goblet of blood upon the table-top and sign their names. At last, the wine drunk, he unfolded his new plan.

This was nothing less than to blow up a big French munition dump situated near Beaune.

Huddled over the table, they agreed that next day the Frenchman should go there to reconnoitre, while Pietro stole the dynamite from the American engineers. So he told his captain later that night.

ESPIONAGE was a violation of French law, so arrests were usually made by the French counter-espionage service. So one of their high officials came to Beaune. At first he was skeptical, but when he had talked to the quiet, modest Pietro, his doubts were removed.

That night, they met again in the little bistro; the two Spaniards, the Frenchman, and Pietro. They talked for a few moments, but that was difficult, for there seemed more customers than usual—Frenchmen, mostly. Diaz grumbled about it. They kept drifting into the back room. One of them passed behind him.

Suspicion dawned in Diaz's mind. He started to his feet. Then suddenly the roof crashed down on top of Diaz's head, lights flashed, the universe roared and whirled.

"They had to blackmail him," Pietro reported to his captain, "but they got him all right."

WHEN the war ended the question arose, how reward Pietro? Neither he nor two other I. P.'s recommended for the D. S. M. could receive it, for they were non-commissioned officers, sergeants. But secret service work, however gallant, was not combat service, it was held—so they could not receive the D. S. C. nor Medal of Honor.

So, until the other day when he got the new decoration of the Purple Heart, a citation by General Pershing for meritorious service was Sergeant Peter de Pasqua's only reward for what, at peril of his life, he had done as Pietro.

His only official reward, that is. He received another, that he valued more highly. Not all his time in Beaune had been taken up in interpreting, plotting and counter-plotting. Between whiles, he had been courting the daughter of the owner of the cafe where he ate his meals, a French girl, quiet, and liked and respected by all.

She was astonished and delighted when her Red Cross interpreter appeared at the wedding, in the uniform of a sergeant of American Intelligence Police. Pietro knew how to keep secret service secret.

REED HARRIS

By Reed Harris

Former Editor, Columbia University Spectator, Student Newspaper

DEANS and presidents of many American colleges believe for some unknown reason, that they are appointed not merely to educate young men and women, but to censor personal morals. As a result some college rules for student conduct often look as if they were composed at a snoopers' convention.

Students, who used to hate but obey most of the rules which deny the right of young people to enjoy any form of ordinary contact and companionship freely, are now forcing the finish of unjust restrictions. By wholesale violations, by mass protests, and by threats to resign or strike, collegians are killing the old rules. And who can blame them for fighting.

Imagine, if you can, living in a college dormitory under restrictions almost like prison rules. Imagine being forced to sign your name in a special register before going out on your one allowed date per week, and being forced to sign that register again as you come in before 11 P. M. Think of your feelings if a dean of students came into your room and walked out with all the pictures of your girl friends, or boy friends, and then took away some of your books and magazines in the bargain. Imagine, if you are a woman, being forced to wear your clothing in certain prescribed ways, from overcoat to lingerie, and being inspected before leaving the building.

Yet rules which make such actions possible are still in effect in many colleges. Elderly men and women, with moral standards designed for an age which has passed, fix regulations for even the most intimate conduct of young women, and sometimes young men, under their supervision.

It is legally recognized in many States that a woman of eighteen is old enough to decide whom she will marry, regardless of her parents' wishes. But in some of these States, colleges demand that girl students, no matter of what age (they average twenty years) follow rules which sound as if they were prescribed for children under fifteen.

Often these young women must remain on the campus at all times except when special permission is given. They must have dates only with boys on the dean's approved list. They must not drink or smoke. They must retire before a fixed time of night. Their phone calls and letters are often limited in number. And, to top it off, they are even prohibited from marrying, on threat of expulsion from college.

While I was editing the Columbia Spectator at Columbia University, I constantly received letters of protests from students living in a dormitory for graduate women students. Some of these women were over thirty, and yet the rules which govern that hall are more strict than those in force in the dormitories of Barnard College, also a Columbia branch, where the women students are younger.

Fortunately, many colleges and universities in the East and Far West are dropping such outmoded regulations. Students have forced their abolition. Even in the Middle West, types of academic law and administrators still remain, the students are beginning to wake up to the fact that they are being treated like small children.

Even with students aware of their power, however, it will take years to change present conditions.

Hollywood's beautiful and glamorous play-spots can be enjoyed by the students when they feel like it; petting along the moonlit college paths is perfectly permissible; the students can smoke when they want to; dance when they want

His alert guiding angel is Chita, a very charming Mexican girl, with whom he is sitting in a cantina with inspiring glasses before them. Chita, by the way, knows the border towns and their leading and misleading citizens in a way surprising in one of her years. But Chita has been places.

"DRUGS and drink! Drink and drugs!" Chita clenched her dainty hands and banged them at sides of her sleek young head. "That's all one sees along the border!" she cried. "Ah, Rojo mio, it is terrible! That and the gambling and the rowdy dance places. The border is like a wound along the edge of my country!"

There was a glass of tequila on the table before me, but I did not thrust it away at Chita's outburst. Instead, I took another sip from it. I knew she didn't mean me when she burst forth about the drinking.

"Is it so terrible?" I asked her, knowing full well that it was, but wanting her to add to my already huge store of bitter knowledge about the border country.

"It is disgraceful," she replied, and I noted slyly that she lifted to her lips a glass of wine I had been so delighted to order for her. "Take Tia Juana, for instance," she went on. "Ah, that is the vicious place! Killings there? Innumerable! The what you Gringos call 'take him for a ride' was an institution in Tia Juana before American cities knew anything about it. In the country around it one may find the bones of hundreds who have ridden away—and never come back!"

"But, about the drinking. The chief business there, if you don't count drug-running, counterfeiting and general thievery, is selling liquor to thirsty Americans. Don't ask me how I know, but, with a very wise little look, 'I have a friend who tells me every—, that is, almost everything. There is one legal drinking place for every 140 people in the place.'"

"There are some good drinking places, aren't there?" I asked.

"Not one," was the prompt answer. "All of them are awful."

"The drinkables are not so bad here in Juarez," I said, touching my glass to the rim of hers.

new viewpoint finds many surprising outlets on the sun-kissed campuses.

In the two earlier chapters of this series, you have read how the collegians struggled in New York City for the freedom of the press and against the general censorship of morals; how the students in Iowa egged their college "prexy" because he wouldn't let them dance; and how students all over the country have scorned drinking bans.

Today you will see contrasted the freedom given students along the Pacific with the rigid regulations foisted onto the young people at some of the colleges in other localities.

First of all, in considering California students, it must be remembered that many of them live at home, and therefore their morals are under the surveillance of their families. This is largely true in Los Angeles, where the University of California at Los Angeles, the University of Southern California, and Occidental College, all co-educational institutions, are situated. The University of California at Los Angeles and the University of California, at Berkeley, are under the same control, but have separate campuses.

An idea of the liberal faculty attitude at these far-Western universities can be obtained from the statement of Dr. Ernest C. Moore, of the University of California at Los Angeles, who, in discussing newly opened smoking rooms for girl students, said:

"We don't want them (the coeds) to smoke all over the campus, but we certainly will not definitely prohibit smoking any place."

Dr. Lucy W. Stebbins, dean of women at the sister institution at Berkeley, likewise believes that "anti" bans make unruly boys and girls. Said Dean Stebbins:

"For many years we have left all matters of student behavior in the hands of the Student Affairs Committee. We believe that by letting the students govern themselves, we give them a far more comprehensive training in good citizenship than we possibly could by laying down a set of drastic rules for their behavior."

But DO the students govern themselves wisely? The faculty doesn't hesitate to answer "Yes." Let us see:

Students at the University of California at Los Angeles decided among themselves that their proms and social affairs should end at 2:30 a.m., while their brothers and sisters at Berkeley said the hour should be 2 a.m. That's plenty late, or early, any way you figure it. If you even suggested at some schools that students stay out until then, the dean of women might swoon right away.

But not so at California. After the students fixed this curfew, the faculty said, in substance, "Okay by us." And so the hour stands.

There is still another example of West Coast liberality, this one rather amusing. Some little time ago watchmen in Griffith Park, on the city limits of Los Angeles, reported that they had seen a party of six or eight university men and women riding horseback in the moonlight, nearly nude, smoking cigarettes and drinking from bottles.

Reporters rushed to F. W. Roewekamp, supervisor of landscape, for a statement. He nearly bowled them over with his frankness. Said he:

"The lack of clothing worn by these young men and women and their drinking are not the things we are interested in. That's bad enough, but we are vitally concerned in the fact that they were smoking and a carelessly tossed cigarette might mean a disastrous fire."

Indeed, the faculty-student relationships in California tend to make placid campuses, but it is not always so placid. The students fight like cats and dogs among themselves.

Just a few weeks ago at the University of Southern California, the weighty problem of whether or not coeds might wear men's trousers to classes flared up. The students took sides and soon the controversy approached the proportions of a free-for-all. The campus ballot boxes were hauled out and a vote taken. There was an overwhelming majority against trousers wearing.

There was great to-do not long ago when Editor John Booth of The Claw, U. C. L. A. publication, wrote that the coeds should share "date" expenses with their boy friends. The girls vetoed this in no uncertain words.

The girls voted among themselves and prescribed regulations for the use of cosmetics. That settled, they began crusading against the men students wearing wide-bottomed corduroy trousers. The coeds won. "Cords" are permissible now only on field expeditions in botany.

The foregoing summarizes briefly the case for the liberal universities on the Pacific Coast. Consider now this faculty thought at Kansas State College, Manhattan, Kansas.

Dean Mary Pierce Van Zile has been in charge of coeds at KSC for years. Recently there have been mumblings against some of her "rules for conduct" and the girls have even termed some of them "outlandish."

Dean Van Zile's most startling pronouncement, which still is in effect, is that coeds must wear bloomers which meet their stockings. The house mothers in charge of dormitories and rooming houses were charged with enforcing the edict, even if they had to make an inspection before permitting the girls to leave the house. It is said the inspections and the rule itself are "discreetly ignored" today.

One of Dean Van Zile's duties is lecturing freshman coeds on their campus behavior. One girl, who sat through the lecture, insists that part of it went something like this:

"If, on the dance floor, your presence seems to be attracting the boy too much, drop your handkerchief and thereby create a diversion. And another thing, girls, you should not whistle while you are with the boys. The necessary puckering of your lips may tempt the boys to kiss you. For the same reason, you should avoid uttering such words as soup. Say 'porridge' instead."

There were many faculty frowns at the time the song "How could Little Red Riding Hood have been so very good and still keep the wolf from the door?" was in vogue, and phonograph records of it were banned from KSC sorority houses, it was reported.

Other reports seem to indicate that regulations of this kind were not alone common in Kansas. At Lindenwood College for Girls, in eastern Missouri, it was said that there was a faculty advisement, amounting almost to a rule, which specified that girls should not adorn walls of their rooms with pictures of their boy-friends. The staring masculine countenances constantly present, it was held, might be inadvisable.

with her wine. "But it is not easy to enjoy even good things to drink in some of the Juarez settings."

"Just how bad are some of these places, if you know?" I urged her. She looked at me searchingly for an instant, smiled broadly and said: "If I know? Well, let's say I've heard. That makes it easier." There was a pause, and then: "There is one, the Moulin Rouge of Juarez. One may see there a beautiful young woman dancing nude. She calls herself Lorraine Gilbert, and her husband, Billy, is master of ceremonies there. She is lovely, yes, but all around her are drunk or half-drunk 'customers,' most of them Americans, who think they are 'seeing life.'—I don't like it." Chita made an adorable "mouth" at the very thought of it.

The main street of Juarez is six blocks long and it is occupied almost entirely by saloons, large and small, and this does not count in the big cabarets built near the international bridges. Nobody seems to work at anything but dispensing and drinking liquor. There may be a decrease in the traffic now that light wines and beer are no longer contraband in the United States, but hard-liquor users will ever be the floating population of the city.

"You said you had something to tell me about the sale of drugs down here," I reminded my attractive companion, who seemed engrossed in watching the tipsy antics of a young man trying to get money from his pocket to pay a waiter.

Chita came winking back with a smile. "Yes, I have something like a tragic joke to tell you," she said. "Morphine, cocaine, the sort of things the poor victims needle into their arms, you know, are sold publicly in many towns. There was one peddler of the dreadful stuff whose home was his sale-place. It was on one of the main streets of a certain city. When an addict wanted a shot,—isn't that what you call it?—he would lounge up to this man's house and lean a bared wrist or arm upon the sill of a curtained window. Then he would slip a coin over the sill.

"And then, if you were watching, you'd see him wince. Why, Rojo mio? Because in exchange for the coin he had received a 'shot' in the arm from beneath the shade. Adroit, yes?"

"But the peddler came upon an evil day. It happened through one of his clients, an American. This one came to the window one afternoon, thrust his arm across and clinked the coin on the sill. The peddler filled his needle and gave the poor creature what he craved. But it was too big a dose. The man walked a few feet from the window and dropped dead. It was the last of the peddler."

FLAG DAY.

A resolution was passed by the United States congress on June 14, 1777, declaring that the flag of the thirteen United States be stripes alternate red and white, that the Union be represented by thirteen stars, white, in a blue field. These were to represent the new constitution.

In 1795 congress decreed that after May 1, 1795, "the flag of the United States be fifteen stripes, alternate red and white, and that the Union be fifteen stars, white, in a blue field."

This change was made after Vermont and Kentucky came into the Union. The stars and stripes were then equal and when a new stars joined the Union a star and stripe were to be added. It was realized that by the addition of a star for each new state it would soon make the flag too large, and a resolution was passed by congress, April 4, 1818, reducing the number of stripes to thirteen—representing the original form—and making the stars twenty in number. It was then enacted that a new star should be added for each new state admitted into the Union. The flag now contains forty-eight stars, corresponding to the forty-eight states.

One of the vegetables that grows particularly well in the fall is the old-fashioned spud—plain Irish potatoes. These are generally planted any time between the 15th of June and the 15th of August.

The favorite varieties for fall planting are Peachblow, Lookout Mountain and Greer. Mountain. For best results be sure to insist on Irish potatoes that are grown in the state of Maine. The northern grown potatoes will grow off much quicker and the yield will be greater.

WHAT TO DO IN JUNE.

LAWNS: For best results, lawns should have a monthly application of a good, high-grade commercial fertilizer followed by a thorough watering. Patch the bare spots. If you are waiting until fall to start a new lawn, sow the lot with cowpeas.

DAFFODILS: As soon as the tops are completely yellow they may be taken up. This isn't absolutely necessary. Dry them in a cool, shady, well-ventilated place.

PRUNING: Take out all of the dead wood in the shrubbery, also in the roses. This is the proper time of the year to prune the spring flowering shrubs, such as bridal wreath, spirea thunbergi, forsythia, redbud, Japan quince, flowering peach, in fact, all of the shrubbery that blooms before the first of June.

SPRAYING: For any insect that chews the leaves or blossoms of a plant the best sprays are those made of pyrethrum or arsenate. For the lice and aphids the best spray to use is either pyrethrum or nicotine sulphate. For the mildews and blights use Massey dust on the roses, and Bordeaux mixture on meal except as they come into bloom. When a more concentrated commercial fertilizer is best. For the roses and the lawn a light monthly fertilization will produce better results than a heavier application at great intervals. For the vegetable garden and cutting garden a good high-grade commercial fertilizer analyzing about 12-4-4 will

When Justice Triumphed

By PETER LEVINS.

AUGIE PISANO has always been regarded as a very important guy in the liquor racket—also a smart little fellow who kept out of the news and never got himself arrested. Questioned, yes, but nothing more. Augie always had an alibi and a good lawyer.

It was all a mistake about him being the eastern representative of the Capone syndicate and the king-pin of the Brooklyn underworld. He never had anything to do with the liquor racket, or anything criminal at all for that matter, because his stable of race horses took up all his time. (Don't ask us how he made his money.) It was ridiculous to think that he had anything to do with the Frankie Marlow murder, the sudden death of Vannie Higgins, or the recent string of sack murders hereabouts.

Which introduction leads us to the ironical theme of today's piece, for his diminutive sportsman who succeeded in stalling off justice for years on all the various cases to which his name was linked is now being held in a comparatively unimportant killing which may cost him his life. He is accused of taking part in the more or less casual extermination of a Union City, N. J., policeman encountered after a silk robbery.

It happened in March, 1931, during a period when the booze racket was in a slump. Things had been going particularly poorly for Little Augie and his associates in Brooklyn—the coast guard and the powerful Lillian gang of Jersey were making run-running very unprofitable.

One of the most profitable sidelines that winter of 1930-31 was the business of knocking off silk trucks. (A load of silk runs to about $10,000.) Robbery after robbery was pulled all up and down the eastern seaboard from Connecticut to the Carolinas. Several mobs were engaged in this racket, and the most successful and elusive was a group of very tough fellows indeed headed, it is charged, by none other than our turf-loving friend, Augie Pisano.

The robbery this story is concerned with occurred in the early morning of March 5, 1931. The gang descended on a garage in Union City, seized the garage attendant and two friends as they sat playing cards, trussed them up, forced them to lie face down in a bus, later locked them in a truck upon learning the bus was to be called for and presently drove off with a $10,000 load of raw silk, scheduled to be shipped south with another load later that morning.

There was nothing hasty about the affair. The robbers remained in the garage for several hours, waiting for the precise moment to make their getaway. Once one of them drove off in one of the cars stored in the garage, evidently for a scouting trip. Soon afterward the owner of a truck stored there, a green-grocer, called for his car. They let him in and he drove the truck out without realizing that the garage at the moment was staffed exclusively by holdup men.

Shortly after 4 a. m. Sergeant James F. Knight, of the Union City police force, started out from the second precinct for a tour in a patrol car driven by Patrolman Joseph Cuny. They were on 12th street, approaching New York avenue, when they observed a sedan approaching them slowly on the slippery street. (There had been a light rain and snowfall.)

"Stop a minute while I see who's in this car," said Knight. Cuny applied the brakes there. Knight jumped out and walked toward the sedan.

Immediately three shots sounded. Cuny, sitting in the police car, and facing the opposite direction, whirled around and saw Knight falling.

Patrolman Harry Trautman heard the shots and came on the run. Sergeant Knight lay dead in the street. Cuny was standing in the police car yelling for help.

Soon every available officer in Union City was engaged on the hunt for the murder car and its crew. But they had made a clean getaway. Cuny had only a vague description of the car, and no description at all of the occupants.

Shortly after 6 a. m. a call came to police headquarters that there had been a holdup in Brulauer's garage. The bus owner had come for his bus and heard the three prisoners still locked in the truck.

The police were inclined to link the two crimes, the robbery and the murder, but their theory got little credence. Rumors started that Knight had been killed for trying to shake down beer and liquor trucks, that the police were trying to cover up some sinister activity of one of their members.

The rumors were particularly distressing in this case because Sunny Jim Knight had the reputation for being a splendid officer. He was 36 years old and left a wife and two young daughters. Moreover, he had a brother on the force and was the son of a retired police captain.

In other words, here was a case

the police of Union City wanted to break.

Commissioner Henry E. Little, Director of public safety, admitted he had no explanation for the murder but declared the Union City authorities would never relax in their hunt for the killers. Little assigned Lieutenant (now captain) Harry Jenkins and Detective (now detective-sergeant) Patrick McCarthy to the case, detaching them from all other duty.

Three weeks after the murder a part of the truckload of stolen silk was recovered in a sewer in Hoboken. Evidently the stuff had become too hot to handle.

In May a black sedan corresponding to one described by the hysterical Cuny was found in Guttenberg, north of Union City. It had two bullet holes in the rear window.

Meanwhile, eight months after the crime, a young man named Anthony Curto was arrested in Bergen county, New Jersey, on suspicion of highway robbery. He was taken into custody by Sergeant John Lennon of the East Rutherford police and questioned as to how it happened that he so often was observed in the vicinity of a holdup.

Curto would admit nothing about any local jobs but eventually offered to solve several New England silk robberies on condition that he be taken to Springfield, Mass., his native city, and allowed to talk to Sergeant John Cleary. Curto had a record in Springfield as a juvenile delinquent, and Cleary had done him some good turns in an effort to straighten him out. The young man vowed he would talk to no one but his friend on the Springfield force.

Taken to Springfield, he led the local and state police on a wild goose chase for several days, and finally got around to talking about silk robberies.

One of them was the robbery in Union City, and the shooting of Sergeant Knight.

Brought back to New Jersey, Curto was interviewed by Prosecutor John F. Drewen, of Hudson county. Drewen noticed that the young man, who claimed he had not been in the murder car, nevertheless was able to describe the actual murder with great detail. Questioned on this point, Curto, finally broke down and confessed he had been the driver of the car. Arrest followed thick and fast. Those taken into custody and charged with murder were James (Squint) O'Leary, Carmine Tredola, Prisquele Pizsa, Julius (The Ape) Benedict, Peter (The Farmer) Serritelli and Harold (Red) Merhan.

Later Salvatore (Blackie) Generella, a dope addict and henchman of Augie Pisano, was arrested and indicted. Also indicted were Thomas (One-Arm) Tom Conway and Michael (Spike) Lyons. Generella is still to be tried and the others are still to be captured.

The trial of the first six prisoners started May 9, 1932, before Judge Charles M. Egan. John Drewen, regarded as one of the most capable prosecutors Hudson county has ever had, conducted the prosecution, and the chief defense attorney was George E. Cutley.

Cuny told his story, the garage attendant and his friends told theirs, and then Defense Counsel Cutley declared it was the contention of the defense that no robbery had been committed, or rather that it had been committed by state witnesses.

Drewen called for Curto. A tense silence of 10 minutes ensued while the star witness was being brought over from the county jail. The courtroom expected a heroic desperado and a five-foot underdog bookkeeper walked in. He was pale and thin from illness, and tried hard to hide his terror.

One by one he picked up the defendants and named them. When he came to Pizsa, the prosecutor suddenly asked Curto if this man Pizsa was not his brother.

"He is," said Curto, and the courtroom gasped. This fact had not previously been made public.

Then he sauntered back to the witness stand and told his story. He described the movements of the whole gang from their meeting in Newark, to the robbery in the garage, and came finally to the murder.

He said that he drove the murder car, that O'Leary and Lyons were with him in the front seat, and that Serritelli, Conway and Pizsa sat in that order in the rear seat. He said Pisano was in another car, and that both cars were conveying the stolen truckload of silk, first the truck, then Curto's car, then Pisano.

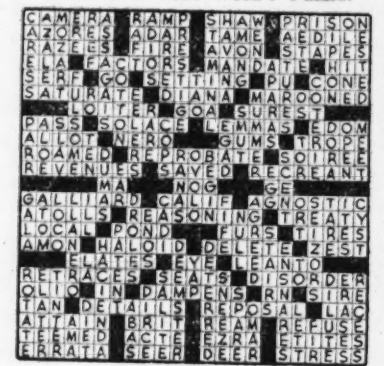

He said Serritelli fired the first two shots through the rear left window and that when the car swerved Pizsa fired through the rear right window.

The murder car followed the truck to a lonely road on the outskirts of Moonachie, a small village in Bergen county, six miles away. Here the contents of the truck were transferred to another truck. According to Curto, the robber gang's truck was driven off by Generella. Then Curto and his brother—their original name was D'Amato—drove in a coupe to join him in Cliffside, N. J.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

Later the stolen truck was found abandoned in the Weehawken slums.

The witness related then how the next day he and his brother drove part of the stolen silk to a tailor shop in New Haven, Conn., and how they drove the empty to a garage in Hewes street, the Bronx, owned by Pisano. Later Curto met O'Leary in Newark and got $10 for all his work. He testified that O'Leary told him that most of the loot had been hijacked from them.

Prosecutor Drewen piled up considerable evidence, all tending to corroborate the star witness's story. To the spectators in the courtroom, he seemed to have a witness to offset every move by the defense.

The first witnesses for the defense were the father, mother and brother of Curto's wife. They swore that from March 4 until March 8, Curto never left their home except to go to work with his father-in-law. These dates would include the alleged Newark conference, the murder and the trip to New Haven.

Then Defense Attorney Cutley started building up an alibi for O'Leary. One of the first disclosures was that O'Leary had married, or had been living with, Miss D'Amato, sister of the star state witness. Two other sisters and their husbands, and half a dozen others, all but two of whom were related to Curto, Pizsa, and O'Leary by a maze of marriages and blood lines, testified that they had been with O'Leary in Springfield on the night of March 4 and most of March 5.

A nurse in a New Haven hospital, Mary Ellen Peterson, testified she had seen Pizsa and O'Leary there early and late on March 5. She said they had come to visit O'Leary's sick wife, registered there under the name of O'Mara.

The next witness for the defense was Mrs. Curto, wife of the state's chief witness.

As Drewen later related in his summation, and as was partly brought out in his cross-examination of the woman, she had visited her husband in Hudson county jail and told him she was out of work, ill and pregnant. Curto at the time was vacillating over whether or not he would take the stand and turn state's evidence.

After her visit Curto told Drewen, according to the latter, that he would testify for the prosecution if his wife were cared for. Drewen started paying her $5 a week.

Later, he said, it developed that her motherhood story was not true. Drewen charged that she had been sent by the defense to spy on her husband and the prosecution.

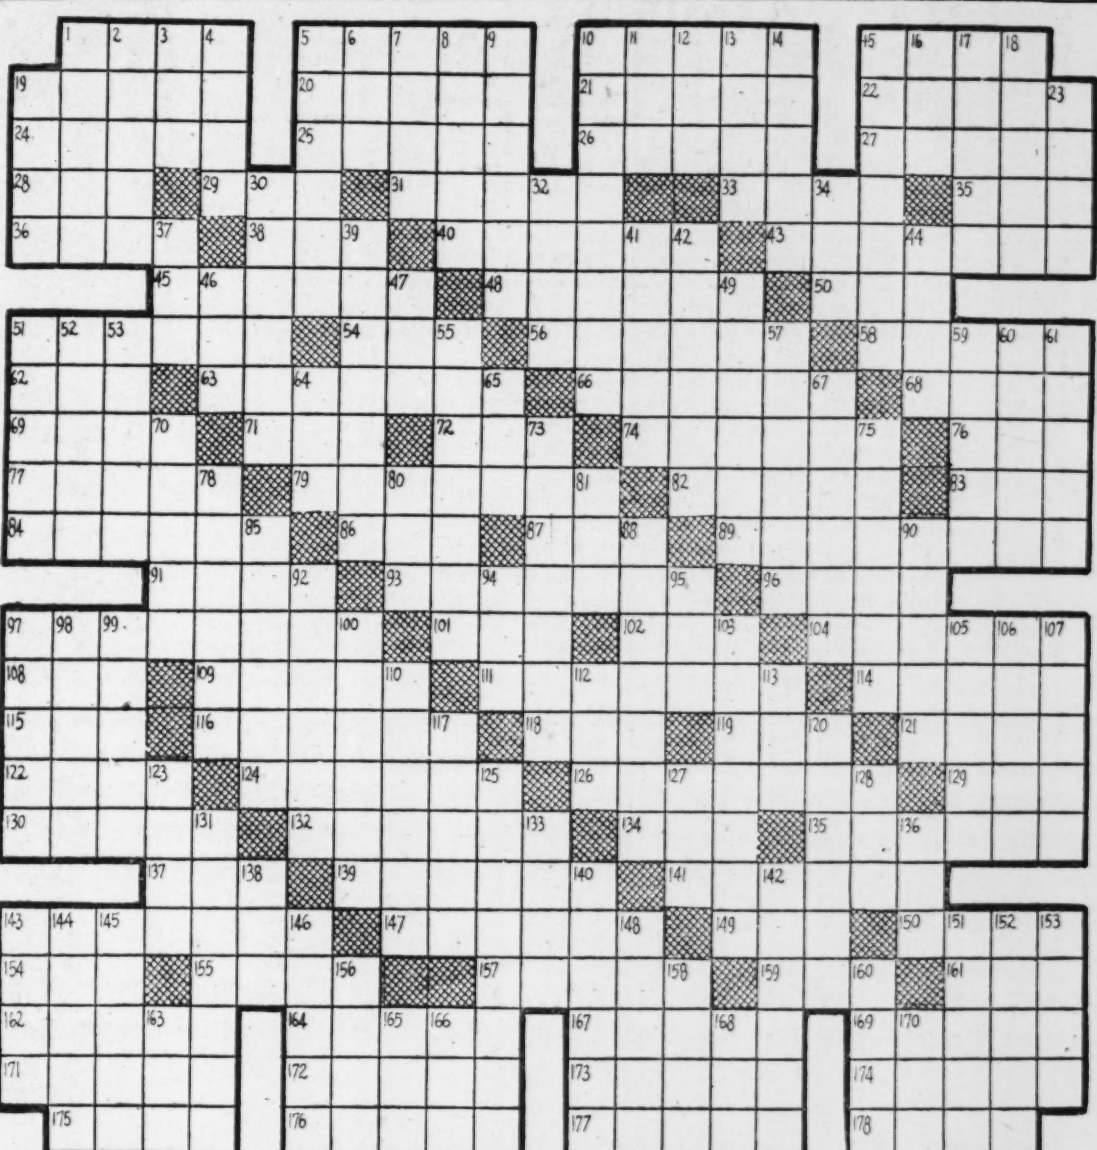

On the stand she declared her husband had told her that Jenkins had promised him immunity and also would see that he got $1,000 reward in a certain Newark case. She asserted Curto lied in his statements to the police and on the witness stand, and said he had never left home in February, March or April, 1931, except to go to work with her father.

Serritelli took the stand and said he was helping a friend move some furniture from Newark to Kearnsburg the night of the murder. The friend verified this and so did a sister.

Drewen started reading the human sieve's long list of convictions.

BRIDAL FASHIONS

JUNE—the most romantic month of all. And what bride doesn't want to look her best on this most important of events—her wedding day?

The Summer bride is very fortunate—for the warm weather wedding allows so varied a choice of color and fabric. But let's talk about the attendants first in the picture sketched below.

To make the wedding procession a really beautiful picture, the maid-of-honor and the bridesmaids must of course have picturesque costumes chosen for them.

Look at the lovely maid-of-honor in her stunning frock of plaid chiffon. Note that the skirt hangs straight and descends right to the floor. These is an unusual bertha collar that knots in front. Very ingenious, too, is the swathed effect at the hip-line which is cut to resemble an apron, and ties at the back.

Organdy is the perfect material for the June bridesmaid's frock. These bridesmaids are wearing extremely bouffant dresses of this material, one in green and the other in yellow. Two deep ruffles form the cape sleeves, matching the flared peplum below the waist. The blouse, cut on surplice lines, crosses high and there is a narrow belt that ends in a small flat bow at the side. The slips worn beneath the dresses are of matching taffeta.

The bridesmaids' hats are made entirely of violets sewn closely together to match the adorable muffs they carry.

The bride's dignified gown of white satin and the details of her lovely costume are described in the caption below.

The June Wedding March Leads a Smart Fashion Procession Down the Aisle

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

SHE leads the procession in this simple and dignified gown of ivory white satin which depends entirely upon its subtle drapery for grace and smartness. The boat neckline gives the fashionable broad-shouldered effect and the bodice drapes softly over the bosom, forming a soft knot at the waistline where it blends into a crushed girdle effect. The headdress is a little cap of white satin that stands out at each side and to which is attached the voluminous, tiered, white tulle veil. Our June bride completes her costume with a string of lovely pearls and an arm bouquet of lilies.

THE GEORGIA CHEROKEE INDIANS--No. 8 OF THE "KNOW YOUR GEORGIA" CONTEST SERIES

A Constitution Roving Pontiac feature.

Photographs by Kenneth Rogers.

THE DESCENDANTS OF THE ORIGINAL CHEROKEE TRIBES still retain their rugged strength. Here some of the 1933 "braves" are playing Indian ball, one of the roughest games ever played, on the government reservation in North Carolina.

THESE LITTLE CHEROKEE INDIAN GIRLS, pictured on the reservation at Cherokee, N. C., are far removed from the original red men that roamed the Georgia hills. They are students in the excellent government school on the reservation.

THE OLD SQUAWS still cling to the arts of the primitive Indians. They are adept basket weavers. The U. S. government maintains a 6,000-acre reservation in North Carolina for the Cherokees.

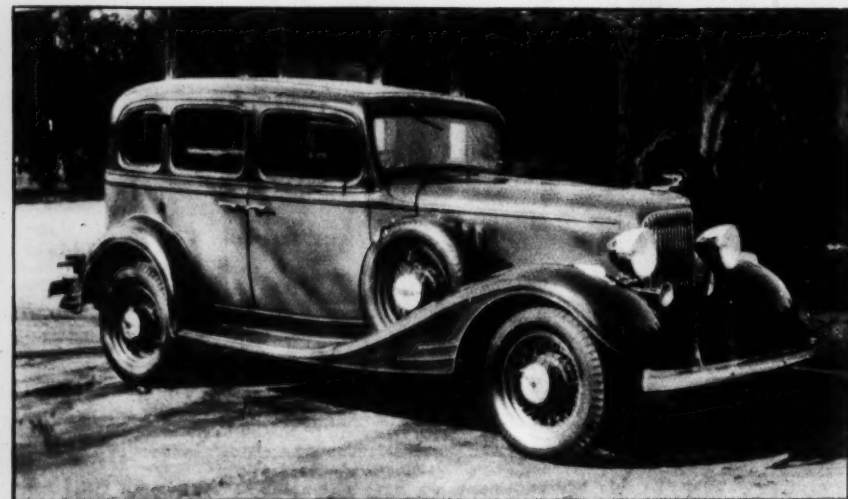

INVALUABLE RELICS being taken from Indian graves on the Etowah river near Carter's Crossing.

"THE STATION"—At this place, five miles south of Dahlonega, the Cherokee Indians were rounded up from the surrounding region in 1838 to be transported from Georgia. (Courtesy Cain's History of Lumpkin County.)

BEHIND THE VEIL

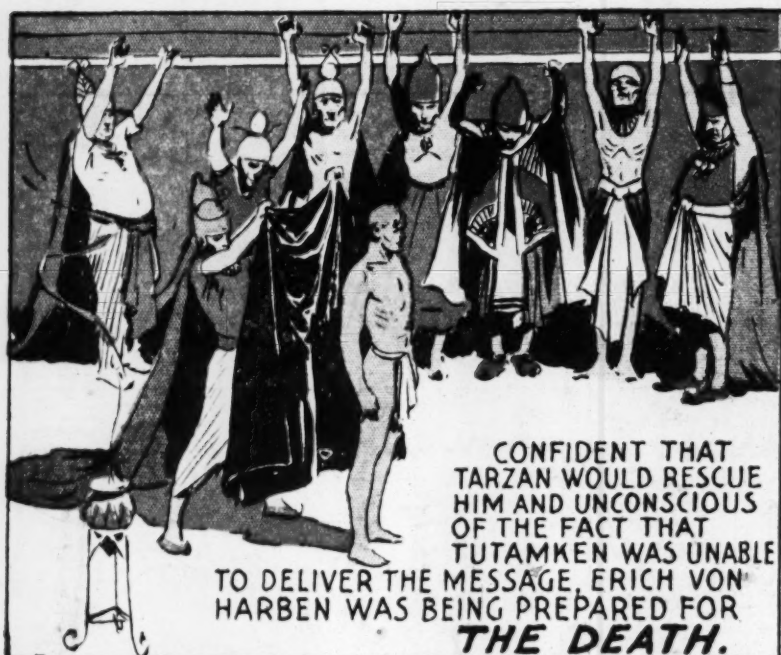

GREAT WAS TARZAN'S SORROW WHEN HE SAW THAT HIS ARROW HAD STRUCK A FRIEND.

TEARING THE ARROW FROM THE FLESH.....

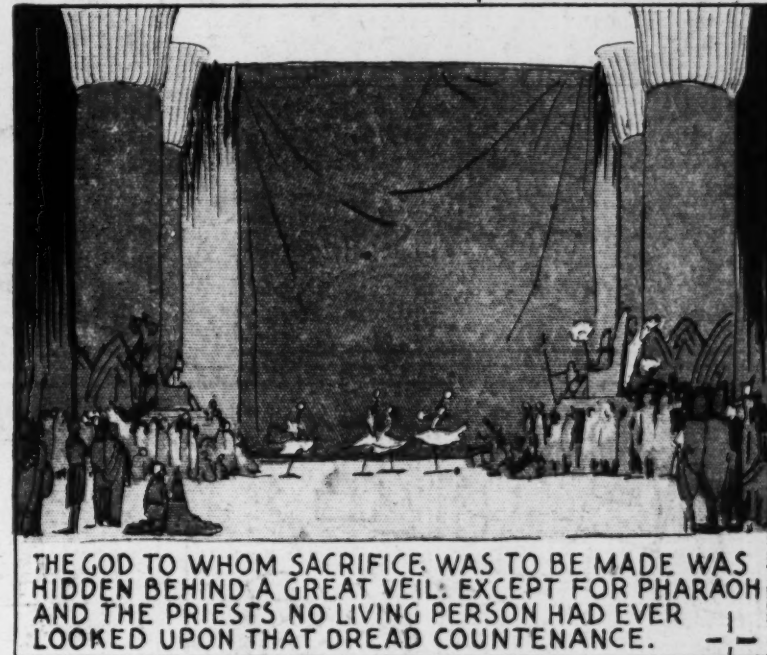

.....THE APE-MAN LIFTED PRINCE TUTAMKEN AND CARRIED HIM OFF TO CARE FOR HIS WOUND

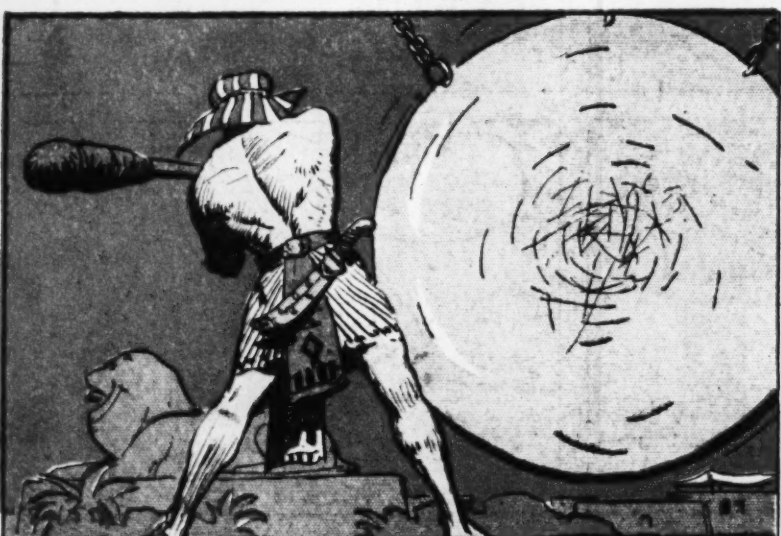

CONFIDENT THAT TARZAN WOULD RESCUE HIM AND UNCONSCIOUS OF THE FACT THAT TUTAMKEN WAS UNABLE TO DELIVER THE MESSAGE, ERICH VON HARBEN WAS BEING PREPARED FOR THE DEATH.

MOBS SURGED ABOUT THE TEMPLE TO WITNESS THE HUMAN SACRIFICE.

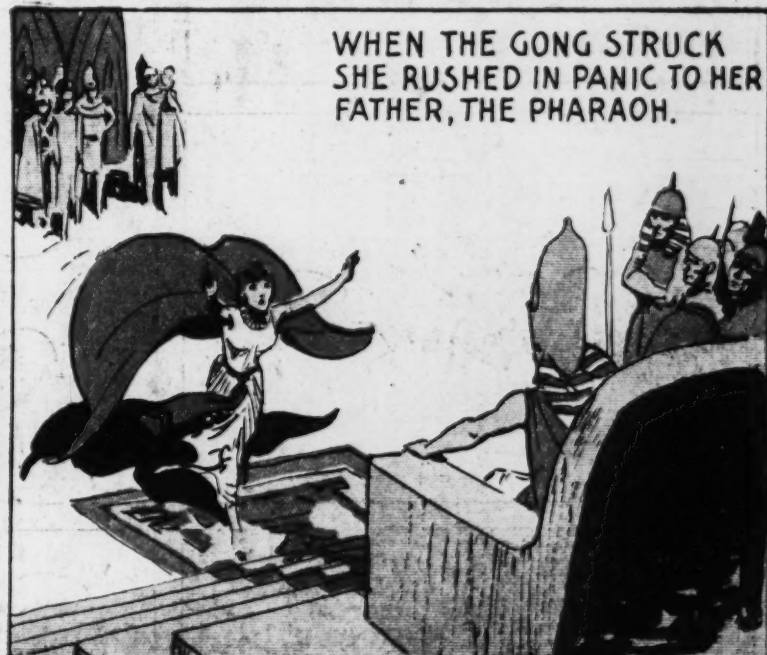

THE GOD TO WHOM SACRIFICE WAS TO BE MADE WAS HIDDEN BEHIND A GREAT VEIL. EXCEPT FOR PHARAOH AND THE PRIESTS NO LIVING PERSON HAD EVER LOOKED UPON THAT DREAD COUNTEenance.

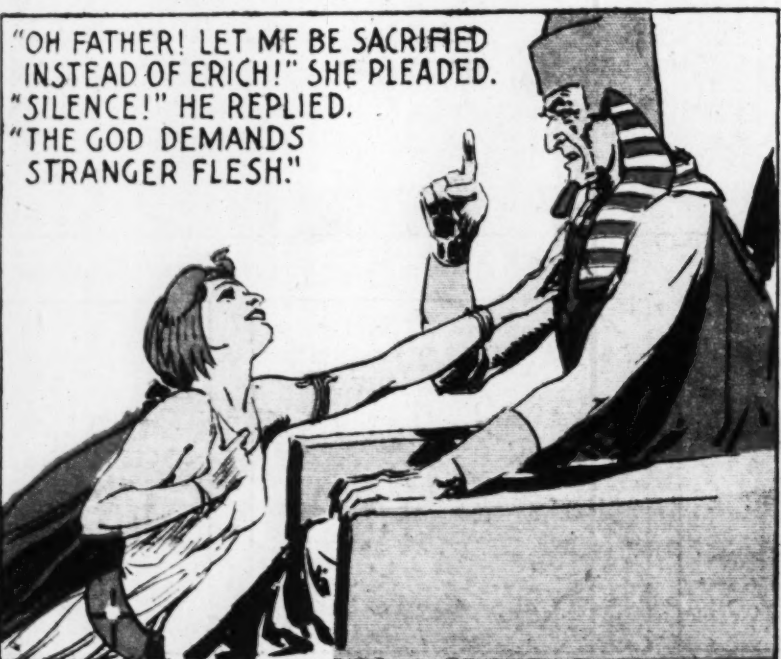

BUT THE HOUR FOR UNVEILING WAS AT HAND. A GIANT EGYPTIAN WAS ABOUT TO STRIKE THE SIGNAL GONG.

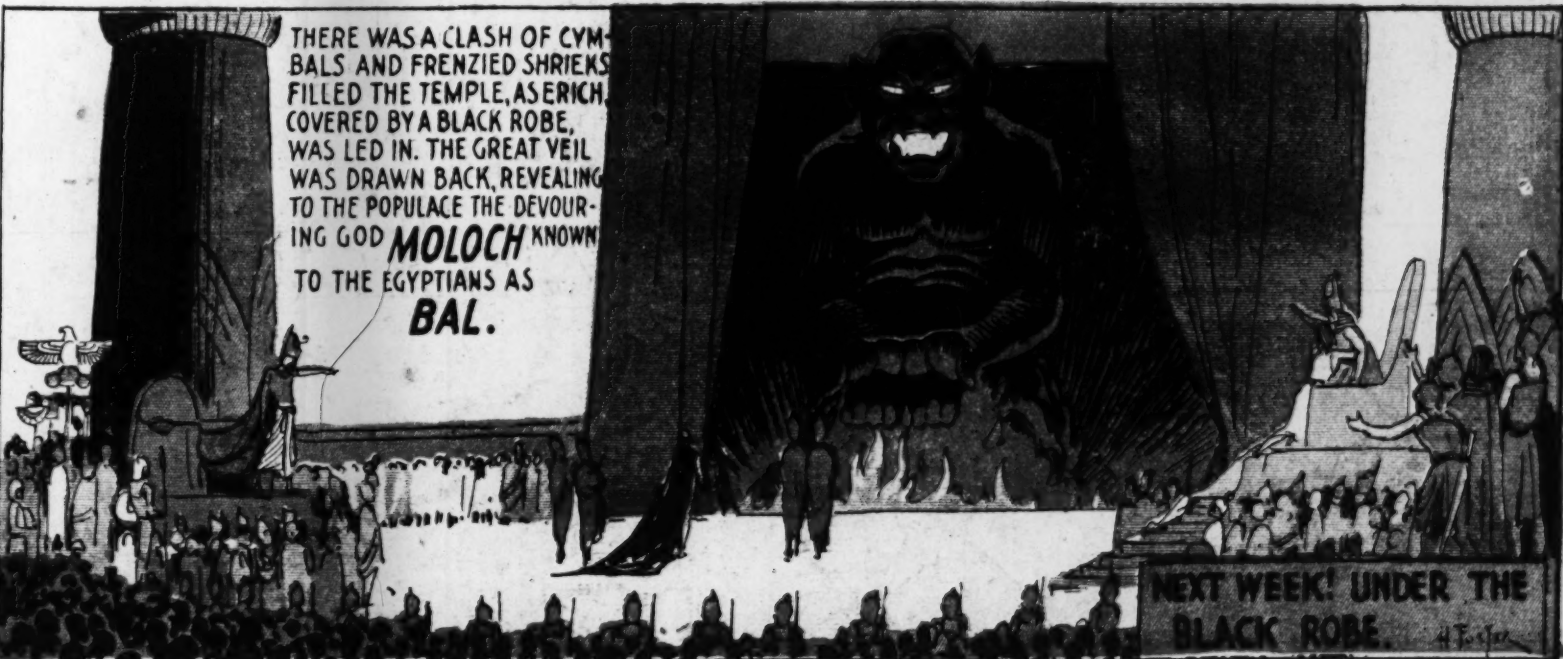

ON THE ROOF OF THE TEMPLE, THE PRINCESS NIKOTRIS LOOKED IN VAIN ACROSS THE DESERT FOR A SIGN OF TARZAN COMING TO THE RESCUE.

WHEN THE GONG STRUCK SHE RUSHED IN PANIC TO HER FATHER, THE PHARAOH.

"OH FATHER! LET ME BE SACRIFIED INSTEAD OF ERICH!" SHE PLEADED. "SILENCE!" HE REPLIED. "THE GOD DEMANDS STRANGER FLESH!"

THERE WAS A CLASH OF Cymbals AND Frenzied Shrieks FILLED THE TEMPLE, AS ERICH, COVERED BY A BLACK ROBE, WAS LED IN. THE GREAT VEIL WAS DRAWN BACK, REVEALING TO THE POPULACE THE DEVOURING GOD MOLOCH KNOWN TO THE EGYPTIANS AS BAL.

NEXT WEEK! UNDER THE BLACK ROBE.
